Hydro Hikes Rates 16%

Electricity rates throughout B.C. will jump eight to 16 per cent next month, B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner announced today. Among details of the new rates, which will also affect gas customers and appear on next month's billing:

— about 80 per cent of commercial and small industrial customers will have electricity rates boosted 12 to 16 per cent.

— all classes of customers in Greater Victoria using liquid petroleum gas-air will face a rate increase of 12 per cent, but the island gas system will continue to operate at a loss.

Bonner said Hydro faces an operating deficit of $35 million for the year ending March 31 and the loss would climb to $80 million by next March without the rate increases.

Aim of the new rates is to leave the power authority in a "slightly better than break-even" position by next year so its borrowing power to keep pace with expansion demands is unimparied.

"It is unfortunate that rate increases must be introduced at this time," Bonner said, "but the serious state of Hydro's financial situation offered no alternative.

"It has been a choice of revenue or financial ruin."

Average increase in electricity rates for home owners is 11.9 per cent and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was asked how that relates to federal anti-inflation controls.

He said he has not seen the new rates and doesn't want to comment until he has studied them.

"With respect to prices in general terms," he said, "the control guidelines do not apply if it's a cost pass-through. There's nothing that restricts prices to 10 per cent —it's a question of cost pass-throughs."

Bonner said large industrial customers such as oil refineries, mines and plywood plants, have contracts which require one year's notice of rate increases. They will have electricity rates go up by an average of 10.1 per cent April 1, 1977 followed by a further average increase of 8.1 per cent a year later in 1978.

Bulk customers such as pulp mills and electro-chemical plants require two years notice and will have an average increase of 18.8 per cent effective April 1, 1978.

Rate increases will range from 8 to 12 per cent for almost all natural gas customers in the Lower Mainland served on the standard firm rate. A few very large commercial customers will have rates higher by 12 to 24 per cent.

Bonner said that for more than 85 per cent of Hydro's 750,000 residential electricity customers the average increase will be less than $3 a month. Cost of cooking a Sunday dinner will still be only about 10 cents.

B.C. Hydro's rates will be under annual review and if present inflationary trends continue, annual rate increases in the future can't be avoided, he said.

"In addition to heavy transit losses, Hydro has been faced with substantial increases in the costs of building new projects, the costs of borrowing money and the effect of inflation on all facets of the utility's operations."

He said B.C.'s electricity and gas increases are typical of those being introduced by major utilities across Canada and the U.S. and these forms of power remain among the best energy bargains available.

Ford Edges Ahead

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Ford edged out Ronald Reagan today in New Hampshire's primary, the first test of voter preference leading to next November's United States presidential election, and Jimmy Carter strengthened his claim to favorite status with a comfortable triumph in the crowded Democratic field.

With only a scattering of votes remaining to be counted after a see-saw race, Ford had 53,959 or 51 per cent of the vote to Reagan's 52,652 or 49 per cent.

Former Georgia governor Carter defeated four major candidates on the Democratic ballot.

The New Hampshire primary serves as an early indicator of public opinion in the U.S. presidential sweepstakes. It results are not binding on the state's delegates to party national conventions where presidential condidates are chosen. Some state primaries commit convention delegates to primary winners.

Final returns were slow coming in, partly because officials in Keene, a Ford stronghold, delayed release of their totals until a more complete picture of the city's voting was in.

A SEAT IN THE SUN — when it finally comes — will be provided at various points along the Government Street semi-mall this summer. City paint shop employee Brian Robinson puts a finishing touch to one of the attractive old-style benches, made in the city's public works yard from a design borrowed from the city of Seattle.

More Snow Thursday

Heavy snow flurries reduced visibility to less than two miles in the Greater Victoria area today and there is more to come Thursday, but the weather office says there is no cause for alarm.

As long as the temperature remains at 3 C (38F) the snow will melt, a spokesman said.

Snow remained for a short while on the Malahat and road conditions were slippery, according to RCMP.

Compared to mainlanders, Victorians are lucky. As much as six centimeters of snow fell on parts of the lower mainland and Fraser Vallery early today, causing driving problems on higher levels of the north shore of Burrard Inlet.

The reason for the snow flurries is because cold air has moved down to a level of 1,000 feet and this is mixing with moist air from the southwest.

Rinkside Supervisors At City Hockey Games

A brawling hockey game in Saskatoon last week between the Victoria Cougars and the Saskatoon Blades sent several players to hospital, one with a serious eye injury. The wave of criticism touched off by the game may produce a permanent change in rules in the Western Canada Hockey League.

In the controversy following the game, the Blades Booster Club has written to Victoria city council asking support for a move which would see anyone responsible for a similar brand of hockey violence ousted from the game at all levels.

How do Victorians feel about the Saskatoon club's suggestion? Do Cougar boosters feel the violence has gotten out of hand? Let's hear from Times readers. Please send in the coupon below to the Times and give your opinion. No names will be used without first getting permission.

I (approve) (disapprove) of the Saskatoon Boosters' suggestion because _____

Name _____

Address _____

Victoria city council will ensure that there is rinkside "supervision" of hockey games in the Memorial Arena for the remainder of the current season, to deal appropriately with any outbreaks of violence.

And to curb the problem in future it wants safeguards written into its next contract with the Victoria Cougars.

Council approved the measures at its caucus meeting Tuesday, on a recommendation from Mayor Mike Young.

The mayor, who had voiced strong concern following last Friday's rough-house incident at Saskatoon, said such action at the arena was necessary because council had expressed dissatisfaction with the capabilities of the League (Western Canada Hockey League) in eliminating violent acts."

Young said arrangements should be made to supervise the remaining games on the Cougars' schedule which runs out March 27, "with a view to prosecution in the event that any violence does take place of a criminal nature."

The person or persons would "observe" the games, and he wasn't sure if police officers would necessarily be involved.

In addition, recreation director Jack Morgan should be instructed to propose appropriate anti-violence provisions to be included in the city's next contract with the club, and that contract would be considered "in the light of provisions made by the league to prevent a recurrence and in the light of the conduct of the clubs for the remainder of this season."

Young stressed that council wasn't trying to sit in judgment on what had happened at Saskatoon, but it was taking note of the concern expressed by civic authorities there.

"We must move strongly and effectively to ensure that it doesn't happen in our bailiwick," he told council, adding that sports clubs have an obligation to the public to ensure public facilities are used in a lawful manner.

"We have to be forewarned and forearmed— and I might add the feeling is widespread."

Law and Order Bill 'Protects Society'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Capital punishment would be abolished in Canada and replaced with longer jail terms for murderers, gun control and tougher bail and parole rules, according to legislation introduced Tuesday by the Trudeau government.

The measures are contained in a two-bill law-and-order package presented by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and Justice Minister Ron Basford.

The two bills form a package of proposed amendments to the Criminal Code. One deals with murder and its penalties, the other provides measures to beef up the protection of society against crimes of violence.

But in Vancouver, a B.C. prison officers' spokesman said the anti-hanging bill is "an absolute farce."

Bob Kerr, president of the Joint Peace Officers Council of B.C. said in an interview that the new security proposals in the criminal law amendment act will result in hostage-taking by prisoners becoming a weekly event.

Kerr, a guard at Chilliwack Forest Camp, also predicted an increase in "accidental" shootings by policemen and a general acceleration in the crime rate.

"The federal cabinet lives in an ivory tower," he said. "They're not walking the streets and they're not in the prisons. And we're losing the battle against crime in both places."

Kerr said his group will fight the government's stand by becoming politically active.

Rod Keary, president of the B.C. Police Chiefs Association and New Westminster police chief, said the association probably would make its position known after a meeting March 4.

The Allmand bill would create two categories of murder, each punishable by life imprisonment if it is adopted by the Commons.

Persons convicted of first-degree murder would have to serve 25 years in prison before being eligible for parole, compared to the present 15 years.

Those convicted of second degree murder would have to serve a minimum of 10 years but a judge, in individual cases, could boost that up to 25 years after seeking the view of the jury.

First degree murder would include the following:

—planned and deliberate murder including "contract" murder,

—the murder of a police officer or a person working in a prison or penitentiary in the line of duty,

—murder committed in the course of hijacking of aircraft, kidnapping and certain sexual offences including rape and attempted rape.

Second-degree murder would include all other murders, such as murders of passion.

In addition, convicted murderers would not be allowed unescorted temporary absences or day paroles until they had completed all but three years of their mandatory sentences.

Allmand told a news conference there was no "scientific" basis for the 25-year minimum sentence and indicated he was not overly happy with it.

It was, in effect, a trade-off so that the Commons would pass the abolition bill. There will be a free vote on this and it promises to be close.

The government plans to bring the Basford protection bill for second reading in the House next Tuesday and see it through to committee for article-by-article study.

—Measures are proposed to authorize provincial governments to create special commissions of inquiry into organized crime.

—Wiretap laws would be amended to give the police more leeway to use such devices in their fight against organized crime.

The courts will be authorized to allow police wiretaps in relation to all indictable offenses. At present there is a specified list of offenses in the law.

—New provisions would allow the courts to impose an "indeterminate sentence" against "dangerous offenders including sexual offenders."

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia announced Tuesday that its balance of revenue increased 125 per cent to $1.2 million for the three months ended Jan. 31, compared with a balance of $532,000 for the same period of 1975.

98% Favor Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Transportation Union has voted 98 per cent in favor of a strike, union spokesman Glen Bowles said Tuesday. After counting the vote, the UTU contacted the British Columbia Railway about resuming negotiations beyond the confines of the Munroe Report, which includes recommendations unacceptable to the union.

ONE-TON HASH HAUL

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP officers seized an estimated $9 million worth of hashish, one ton of the drug, in a raid carried out Tuesday night in the west part of the city, a police spokesman said.

Insp. Roger Perrier said five men and a woman were arrested on the Trans-Canada expressway, and police believe the suspects were coming from Dorval airport when they were arrested.

Also seized were a 2-engine Cessna aircraft, a one-ton truck and two cars, Insp. Perrier said. The hashish was found in the truck, he said.

EMPLOYERS BACK GUIDELINES

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia employers negotiating with unions are increasingly sticking to the federal income guidelines, William Hamilton, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said Tuesday.

He said the change is taking place on a month-by-month basis and he hopes by June "we'll see a fairly solid position being taken by management."

Hamilton was commenting on the decision of the Canadian Labor Congress to fight the guidelines at the bargaining table, and on the fact that many employers have joined their unions in efforts to get the anti-inflation board to approve settlements above the guidelines.

The CLC said unions should negotiate for settlements which will be rejected by the anti-inflation board, because when the program ends the full negotiated settlement must be given.

Hamilton said the CLC is "counselling people to break the law and that's a 'no no' in anybody's books.

"The regulations provide that no such residual provision covering future increases may be negotiated and agree to where they evade the impact of the anti-inflation regulations," Hamilton said.

STRICT GUN CURBS PLANNED

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A series of gun control measures, including licencing of people to possess firearms, are contained in Criminal Code amendments introduced in the Commons Tuesday.

Justice Minister Ron Basford said the objective of the measures is to "screen out potential misusers and to restrict the availability of guns."

Every person in possession of any firearms or ammunition, will require a licence.

The licence, valid for five years, will be issued only when the licencing officer is satisfied that the applicant has nothing in his background that would render him unfit to possess a licence.

Applicants for licences will also be required to submit the statements of two guarantors, from a selected list as in the case of passports, who have known him for more than two years.

Persons under 18 who wish to use firearms will require special permits.

All firearms and ammunition dealers, both wholesale and retail, importers and manufacturers must have permits.

They must also keep records of every transaction involving firearms or ammunition.

There will also be efforts to collect unused firearms. Many of the 10 million long guns in Canada are held by Canadians who no longer have any use for them.

Persons using offensive weapons while committing an indictable offence, will be liable to a mandatory minimum sentence of at least one year and up to a maximum of 14 years, to run concurrently with any other sentence imposed.

In Vancouver today, Vic Wall, director of the B.C. Federation of Shooting Sports, said that the legislation is aimed at the wrong group of people.

"We feel the aim of the government is to disarm the law-abiding Canadian citizen instead of concentrating on the criminals as they should be."

"Many people have quite expensive collections of firearms which are being used in a law-abiding manner, and I don't think for a moment the average sportsman will simply come out and turn them in without any compensation or anything," he added.

Sydney Police Back

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Police in this steel-making city of 33,000 returned to their jobs early today after a meeting of city and union officials convened by Attorney-General Leonard Pace. The policemen went back to work after suspensions of the 63-man force were lifted.

Strike Against Union Slim, Says Official

Staff representatives and office employees of the Hospital Employees Union have served strike notice on the union, opening the way for the possibility of a picket line around the union's own offices.

But the chances of a picket line are slim, said Bob McCartney, president of the 22-member Hospital Employees' Staff Union which represents workers in HEU offices in Victoria, Vancouver and Kelowna.

"The whole thing has been diffused. We're on the road to a settlement," McCartney said today.

The Hospital Employees' Union has been involved in negotiations for a province-wide master agreement for its 16,000 members at the same time as top officials of the union are bargaining with the union's staff. Both contracts expired Dec. 31.

The staff union earlier this month served strike notice on the union, and the union countered with lockout notice.

McCartney said the main issue in negotiations has been hours of work, traditionally a difficult problem with union representatives who work changeable hours.

"Working for a trade union organization, you work erratic hours," McCartney said. "You have to work 12 hours one day and then be back at work the next day."

He said the issue has now been solved and an overtime banking system agreed on so staff representatives will get time off in lieu of overtime.

The staff union is also asking for a 35-hour work week, shortened from the current 37½-hour week.

Further meetings with provincial mediator Ed Simms are scheduled for this week and McCartney said he thinks a settlement can be worked out soon.

MURDER ATTEMPT TRIAL ORDERED

DUNCAN — Wayne Douglas Sarginson, 22, of Lake Cowichan was ordered in provincial court Tuesday to stand trial in higher court on a charge of attempted murder.

Judge Lance Heard made the order after a three-day preliminary hearing.

Sarginson is charged in connection with a stabbing incident involving a Lake Cowichan woman last summer.

Mrs. Edith St. Amant, 31, was found in critical condition in the bush near Lake Cowichan on Aug. 19.

Police said she had been stabbed 17 times.

A second man was arrested but charges against him subsequently were dropped.

Sarginson has elected trial by judge and jury.

His supreme court trial is slated for the spring assizes in Nanaimo, which begin in April.

Meanwhile, Sarginson has been released on his own recognizance.

Bennett Vows Inflation Curb

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett says the Social Credit government plans strong measures to control inflation, and will introduce electoral reforms before the next British Columbia election.

Bennett made the comments Tuesday in an interview.

He said inflation controls will be brought in at the forthcoming session of the legislature, which begins March 17.

Bennett would provide no details, however, saying this will have to await presentation to the session.

"At this legislature, you will see us take very strong measures—very strong measures—to deal with anti-inflation."

"B.C. is not going to allow the lack of restraint and excessive demands from all sectors of society to mar the future of this province.

"It's going to touch everyone and it's not going to be selective," he said. "Restraint means less demands on the economy generally, not just on the government."

Bennett said B.C. controls will meld with the federal government's three-year program of wage and price controls, begun last October, but repeated his position that all anti-inflation controls should last for shorter periods, such as 18 months.

The premierr also said that the government will establish a commission on electoral reform. Included in its review will be campaign spending, party funding, and alternative voting methods.

"It (the commission) will be given a lot of responsibility," he said. "It will be struck far in advance of any election, so that its recommendations can be in, and any resulting legislation in."

Meanwhile, Marc Eliesen, policy adviser to former Premier Dave Barrett, denied statements by Premier Bennett htat he had set policy or signed agreements without the authorization of the cabinet of the ousted New Democratic Party government.

Bennett had said on a Vancouver open-line porgram the Social Credit government discovered that Eliesen was signing contracts for the previous government.

"Obviously, I wasn't the government" Eliesen said. "Any responsibility I had with regards to my signature on agreements had to be approved by the responsible minister or the treasury board."

Universities Get Another $7.5M

British Columbia's universities have received an additional operating grant of $7.5 million from the provincial cabinet.

Universities were originally allotted $150.2 million in the current budget, but a cabinet or order released today said additional funds were urgently needed.

Prisoners Arrive In N.B.

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — Two prisoners involved in a hostage siege at the British Columbia penitentiary last week have been placed in custody in the federal maximum security institution in this eastern New Brunswick community.

A Dorchester penitentiary spokesman said today transfer of Andy Bruce, 27, and Dwight Lucas, 21, from Vancouver was completed late Tuesday night after they were flown east on separate commercial flights.

"Adequate security measures have been implemented to maintain custody of the two at Dorchester," the spokesman said.

A third prisoner involved in the 14-hour incident at New Westminster, Dwight Lowe, remains in custody in Vancouver where he is expected to appear in court this week.

The three prisoners took three guards hostage and held them at knifepoint for 14 hours before surrendering when prison authorities agreed to meet their demands, including transfer to Dorchester.

Each prisoner was escorted by three guards who paid return fares of $402 each, and the one-way economy fare for Bruce and Lucas was $205 each, said an Air Canada spokesman. Bill for the two flights was $2,822 plus overtime for the guards.

U.K. MDs Agree

LONDON (Reuter) — Leaders of Britain's junior hospital doctors decided Tuesday to accept a compromise solution to a five-month-old pay dispute which at one stage crippled the state-run National Health Service (NHS) for several weeks. The decision by the Hospital Junior Staffs Committee means the 19,000 doctors will receive overtime payments after working 40 hours a week instead of 80.

Gas Hike Causes Dismay

B.C. Hydro increases are being met with dismay by users of gas in the greater Victoria area, who are already paying two-thirds and more again than people on the lower Mainland.

For 200 therms (each therm is 1,000 British Thermal Units) in Greater Victoria during a two-month billing period a commercial consumer pays $56.76 now.

In Vancouver the price is $34.

Facing another 12 per cent on April 1, while Hydro says Lower Mainland hikes, generally, will be within eight to 12 per cent, Victoria consumers are angry.

Ralph Higgins, who uses gas for all his machines in his chain of laundromats says Greater Victoria users are being penalized.

"It isn't fair on the people on the island," he said, "We had a 50 per cent hike in September and now we're facing another big one."

Higgins said commercial users, like restaurants who rely on gas, are going to be hit hard.

"The big users never get anywhere," he said, adding that many people who also use gas in their homes are going to suffer.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman, however, said Hydro will still be losing money on the Victoria gas service, in spite of the April 1 hikes.

"The trouble is there is no natural gas on the island," she said, "Here we have to use a much more expensive mixture of butane and air."

She doubted if natural gas would ever be piped to the island.

"Perhaps if pulp mills began using natural gas it might become economically viable," she said, "But gas is a depleting resource and that might not be the best use."

She said the terrain of British Columbia was an undeniable factor in producing higher costs for electricity and gas in B.C. than in other provinces.

25 Years Before Dam Needed, Study Claims

Water supply requirments of North Cowichan can be met for at least 25 years without building the controversial Chemainus River dam, according to a provincial government study.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said today studies by the water resources service show water supply for at least 25 years can be obtained from wells along the lower Cowichan and Chemainus Rivers and by development of Bapon Creek source.

To ensure that scheme will not affect flows downstream, the report recommends upstream storage be developed for at least the low-flow periods and to compensate for any affect the wells might have on river flows.

"The water supply alternative recommended by the water resources service is substantially less costly than the previously proposed Chemainus River dam and will provide better water quality and have less environmental impact," said Nielsen.

The dam project was suspended in March, 1975, by the environment and land use committee of government after representation by several environmental groups.

It involved construction of a 100-foot dam on the Chemainus River itself.

As a result of that suspension a study was initiated to determine whether any feasible alternative water sources existed.

Nielsen said the use of wells will involve an estimated capital cost of $2.1 million compared to $8.3 million for the dam project.

Copies of the study will be available to interested groups and the water resources service will hold meetings with the municipality and other groups to discuss technical aspects before a decision is made on holding a pubic hearing into the proposal.

STUDENT BREAK

Secondary school students in Greater Victoria will get a holiday Friday while their teachers go to the classroom to study new teaching approaches at a day-long secondary teachers' convention at the University of Victoria.

The convention will include seminars on the main subjects taught at secondary schools, ranging from chemistry to percussion band instruments.

Two keynote speakers include Mel Hurtig, Edmonton publisher, who will describe the defeat of Canadian nationalism and Dr. Jens Robinson, who will speak on "Competency-based education." Robinson has taught chemistry and psychology in a variety of U.S. institutions and is superintendent of the Marion County School District in Oregon.

Lockheed Sued By Widows

ROME (Reuter) — The widows of seven Italian air force pilots who died flying American-designed Lockheed F-104 Starfighter jet aircraft are suing the Lockheed Air craft Corp. for damages of several million dollars, their lawyer said tuesday.

Melvin Belli, an American lawyer of Italian origin, said a suit was filed with a San Francisco court claiming the damages from Lockheed for "errors of construction."

He said Lockheed recently agreed to pay about $1.5 million as a compromise settlement to 50 dependents of West German pilots who died in their Starfighters, dubbed the "Widowmakers."

Belli, who represented the German widows, also was the lawyer for the late Jack Ruby, convicted murderer of Lee Harvey Oswald, President John Kennedy's assassin.

Belli said he is claiming $500,000 for each of the childless widows he represents and more for those with children.

A cold moist unstable air mass covered all of the province early this morning. Skies are generally cloudy and precipitation either in the form of snow or rain was reported from most of the districts.

A storm located in the Gulf of Alaska is expected to continue to feed moist cold air over the province. Thus little change in the weather is anticipated during the next two days.

Stay in China, Nixon Told

WASHINGTON (AP) Senator Barry Goldwater said today that former president Richard Nixon can do the United States a favor by staying in China. He accused Nixon of breaking the law by making statements in Peking about U.S. foreign policy.

Asked whether Nixon's trip had any impact on President Ford's performance in the New Hampshire primary, Goldwater said:

"I don't think Mr. Nixon's visit to China did anything and if he wants to do this country a favor he might stay over there. He is violating the law."

Goldwater made the statements in an interview on ABC-TV's program Good Morning America.

"The Logan Act prohibits any American — and that's all he is, he's an ex-president and a private citizen — the Logan Act says no one but the president and the secretary of state can discuss foreign policy, and he made a tremendous mistake in doing what he did at the time he did it.

"I don't think it, the trip, hurt Mr. Ford. I don't think the average American has enough respect for Mr. Nixon anymore to really believe that what he's doing is in anybody's interst but Mr. Nixon's."

The Logan Act prohibits U.S. citizens from trying "to influence the measures or conduct of any foreign government or any officer or agent thereof" without authority from the government.

The law also bars a citizen from defeating "the measures of the United States" in any correspondence or talks with a foreign government or its agents.

The maximum penalty for violating the law is a fine of $5,000 and three years in prison.

SKAGIT WAR FUND

The provincial government will provide a "limited amount of funds" to environment groups fighting to prevent raising of the Ross dam and subsequent flooding of the Skagit River valley by Seattle City Light.

The funds will help groups intervene in the legal battle expected to be waged following a Washington, D.C., court ruling allowing Seattle City Light to proceed.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said today independent environmental organizations from B.C. and the state of Washington plan to intervene in the court action, but the B.C. government will not be officially involved.

Negotiations between the B.C. government and City Light to work out a compromise to prevent flooding will continue meanwhile, he said.

The former government also helped environmental groups in early attempts to prevent construction of the addition to Ross dam, said a Nielsen aide, but this is the first time "it's been publicly acknowledged."

ONE HUMP OR TWO? For less than the price of a car — and with no charges for gas — Keith Connell, of the Bowmanville Zoo near Oshawa, can offer a choice of five camels. He's selling the three females for $3,000 each and the males are going for half price to make room for five smaller animals this spring. The zoo owner says he has been unable to sell or trade the camels to other zoos because of cutbacks in their spending.

JAMES BAY FIRE

A fire in a double garage at 116 Clarence in James Bay Tuesday night resulted in about $1,000 damage, Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said today.

Coates said the fire started in the rear of the building and was caused by an electrical malfunction.

Firemen, who reached the scene at about 10:20 p.m. managed to push to safety two vehicles parked inside before flames engulfed the rear wall and roof of the garage. One of the cars was slightly damaged, Coates said.

Courtroom Cancelled By Sidney

Space which had been reserved for a courtroom in a Sidney town hall addition under construction will now be used for municipal offices.

The court in Sidney was closed about a year ago with residents being told one reason was lack of suitable accommodation. But town officials have given up waiting for a provincial government decision on whether a new court will be opened in the addition.

Town clerk Geoff Logan said he has tried repeatedly to reach Attorney-General Garde Gardom for a decision and the latest word is the situation is still under review.

The $85,000 two-storey addition will be ready for occupancy in two or three weeks and it has now been decided to use the space set aside for the courtroom for building inspection and public works staff.

Logan said if a Sidney court is re-established it would have to be in the old portion of the building.

Alert for Testing

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The army said today it called a sudden military alert in Bangkok to test armed forces preparedness, but the move prompted Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj to cut short a trip abroad.

Upkeep Pressure

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says his department is examining the need for provincial legislation to ensure estranged husbands keep up court-ordered maintenance payments.

Such a step may be necessary to catch up to the many husbands who duck such orders simply by moving, he said Tuesday. One solution might be to have payments made to a provincial authority which could keep tabs on them through their social insurance numbers.

Speaking to an audience of about 140 at a meeting of Social credit members in Saanich and the Islands riding, Vander Zalm said more stringent maintenance methods would be best handled federally. A person can default by moving from the province in which the divorce or separation is granted.

Taking such a defaulter to court in another province can be expensive, he said, and the home province is often stuck with paying welfare to the abandoned mother.

A clampdown on outstanding maintenance payments won the support today of Norrie Preston, former Victoria Status of Women Action Group president and member of the federal advisory council on the status of women.

"But I want to make sure he (the minister) follows through and makes it workable," she said.

The council has suggested the solution is establishment of a central collection agency for outstanding maintenance payments, she said, adding the agency should be empowered to pay the maintenance whether it manages to collect it from defaulters or not.

If the agency had to pay, they would not be so lax about enforcing the law and the scheme for is a new schedule of payments to improve current regulations that place civil debts — camper payments, speedboat and television payments — before maintenance payments.

Preston urged that the province initiate discussion on the matter at a provincial attorneys-general conference discussing family law this spring so that any new law can be enforced from province to province.

They Deserved a Chance

It is highly ironic that Social Credit, which went on endlessly last fall about the need to decentralize the provincial government, to return authority to the local level, should scrap a fairly successful example of this — the community resources boards, CRBS for short.

But the new broom sweeps clean. Sweeping out, it seems, everything of NDP origin, the good with the bad. New Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm talks sternly of clear lines of accountability and authority straight from his office down to the welfare mother of three in her shabby basement suite.

Things like community resources boards only clutter up the organization charts, seems to be the minister's line of thinking. He couldn't quite equate the CRBs with waste and extravagance because in the limited trial they've had, even the minister admits they eliminated inefficiency and duplication of services—two Socred watchwords of late—since they brought all social services together under one roof.

Vander Zalm cites criticism from municipal officials and the public as another reason for getting rid of the CRBs, but public opposition never stopped the new government before.

And who are the municipalities to cry out now? They were always begging past governments to pay a bigger share of welfare costs. When that was done, and the previous administration logically consolidated social services, municipalities couldn't get out of the way fast enough.

The truth seems to be that politicians at the municipal and provincial levels saw some of their power slipping away to locally-elected CRBs, and acted to nip this dangerous decentralizing trend in the bud. Power to the people? The very idea!

CRBs appeared to be working well where they were established. They put recognizable neighborhood names on a previously faceless bureaucracy. They fostered the idea that neighborhoods should be responsible for their social problems, and that local people probably have a few good ideas on how to deal with them.

Obviously, a dangerous idea — putting decision-making power in the hands of the people those decisions affect.

The Lamp Is Bright

Lax governments and cosy arrangements have given most North American professional associations a very free hand in policing their own numbers. In malpractice suits lawyers often complain about the difficulties in getting one doctor to testify against another accused of a mistake. Yet the same lawyers scream when government proposes more stringent policing of the legal profession. In fairness, it should be said that most professional associations are very careful about keeping their good names. But the secrecy in which they carry out hearings and inspections is often worse than that of the governments they appear to fear.

Given this background, it was refreshing to see the February issue of the RNABC News published by the Registered Nurses' Association of British Columbia. Prominently displayed under the heading, January Hearings Result in Revocations, Suspensions, the professional magazine lists those persons who had their registrations revoked or who have been suspended, along with the reasons for the penalty.

Similar processes are carried on by the medical and other professions, yet names and reasons are never listed in the B.C. Medical Journal. Should the public and far-flung hospitals not have the same protection from errant doctors as nurses? Perhaps more professional associations will follow this voluntary example set by the nurses. If not, the day will come when government steps in and takes over the policing that no minority group of people, be they professional or not, should have in a democratic society with egalitarian pretensions.

Powerful, Vivid Impressions

OTTAWA — Thanks to television, U.S. pop artist Andy Warhol once commented, "everyone will get a chance to become famous — for 15 minutes."

Five television networks — three English, two French — covered every minute of the Conservative leadership convention. Those cameras have etched onto the conciousness of the Canadian public impressions that are powerful, vivid, fleeting.

Of Gisele Wagner, wife of the last-ballot loser Claude Wagner, for example, sitting protectively beside her sobbing daughter, herself bewildered and uncomprehending, when the final results were announced. Of Bennett Horner, brother of another loser, Jack Horner, raging at a CTV interviewer because of the way the cameras had made it impossible for Horner to think clearly at a critical moment, but also of him trying desperately to control his anger so he would not feed the legend of "the battling Horners."

Baker's Dozen

There is much to criticize about the role of television in politics. In a later column I will try to analyze the impact of the medium upon an occasion such as a political convention. Television's achievement though, is to provide the public with insights, direct and intense, into the political process that can come to the public in no other way.

Because of television, Canadians know far more about a clutch of important individuals — the baker's dozen leadership candidates — than they did before or could have learned in any other way.

As winner, Joe Clark commands all the attention. The television cameras, and the press, now will come to him. The other candidates have had their 15 minutes of fame. It is worthwhile to sort out the impressions that the more important among them have left behind to mark their passing on the national screen.

The winners:

Claude Wagner. Nothing so became Wagner's star-crossed campaign for the leadership as his losing of it. Many commentators, like vultures, and many delegates, like rabbits, believed that if defeated, Wagner would blame his loss on his race and on bigotry.

Wagner met his down-going with dignity and grace. He had expected the convention would "write a page of history," said Wagner, in a clear reference to the possibility the Conservatives might elect the first French-Canadian leader in their history.

"Instead, I have the impression we have written a book." The hall exploded, in relief and joy.

Flora MacDonald. Populism in the end could not overcome the handicap of her sex. She refused the excuse: "I have never felt myself discriminated against because I am a woman, and I do not intend to start thinking that way now."

She brought a cleanness to the grubby world of politics, her answer to the public's "cynicism" about politics which was the essence of her campaign. When the painful moment to conceed came Flora walked like a queen through the packed hall, the crowd instinctively parting as she approached. She brought also to Clark, in a demonstration of the loyalty she commanded in a way that few losers are able to, all her votes.

Jim Gillies. Too much the professor to win, he showed his credentials as the best mind in the group. Also, a gift less often credited to him, the power of quick decision. While others hesitated and fumbled, Gillies needed only five minutes to read the meaning of the first ballot, and to read it right.

The losers:

Paul Hellyer. While Canadians watched, he nailed his own coffin—from the inside. In a party aching for unity, he attacked the "red Tories." He then apologized, and then explained that he had meant what he had said. After the humiliation of the first ballot, Hellyer left the hall, a loser disgraced less by his ineptitude than by his sourness.

Sinclair Stevens. The most ideological of the candidates, his cast of policy well to the right, he somersaulted to the left and almost certainly was the cause of Clark's victory. His own delegates, once the first shock was over, talked openly of "double-cross" and "deceit." From the new leader, Stevens will get his reward; from few will he now get trust.

Ugly Fury

Brian Mulroney. He showed the shallowness of his own charisma. Not because he spent too much on scarves and skirts and shirts and jackets and matchboxes and on packets of sugar that carried his name. Nor because his speech was flat. But because, when the moment of decision came, Mulroney could not make up his mind and then justified his decision not to decide with the same convincing charm he would have justified his choice, either of Clark or of Wagner.

Jack Horner. His brother, Bennett, defended him with pride. The act that mattered, though, wasn't Horner's cuffing of a cameraman who came close. It was the look on his face, ugly, violent fury at himself, the delegates, the media, the world. A man who hasn't learned, and never will, that politics is not fought in the street.

For all these candidates, these incidents now are memories. For Canadians, because of television, they have become part of our political reality.

W. A. WILSON

Clark May Be Unbeatable

OTTAWA — There is an inevitable Canadian uneasiness over closely fought contests that pit English — and French-speaking people against each other, but the outcome of the Conservative convention provides more reason for hope than worry in this respect.

The fact that a French-Canadian could come so close to winning the leadership of a party that, for most of the last half century has been seriously weak in Quebec, suggests that the Progressive Conservatives have come a long way. The undeniable rifts in the party do not seem to have much to do with the fact that on the last ballot Claude Wagner was opposed by Joe Clark and lost to him by 65 votes.

The serious split that does exist stems from the bitter antagonism of some delegates, many of them from western Canada, to Joe Clark who is, of course, also a westerner. The bitterness that developed in the party's internal warfare of the mid-1960s is not dead yet and, obviously, will not be over as long as some of the participants are still alive.

Clark did not play a particularly prominent part in those old battles — much less so than Flora MacDonald, for example — but he was considered to be one of the instruments through which Davie Fulton (for whom Clark once worked as an executive assistant) opposed John Diefenbaker. And neither that, nor his youth nor his middle place in the political spectrum, endear him to some Tories.

Internal Warfare

The antagonism was evident in several ways. Paul Hellyer did not join the other defeated candidates on the platform when the voting was over. Jack Horner, a truly conservative man whose face expressively reflects the passion with which he holds his political views, went to the platform in evident agony. He left after Clark took his place at the podium. Heward Grafftey and Pat Nowlan looked almost as bitterly unhappy with the outcome as Horner but they stayed in their places.

The range of candidates gave the 2,500-odd delegates a genuine ideological choice and the convention polarized on left-right lines. In his speech to the convention on Saturday, Paul Hellyer was winning broadly-based applause with a fiery speech that was a marked contrast to the dull one he delivered eight years previously as a contender for the Liberal leadership. It seemed obvious that he was making progress in the struggle for delegate support. Then he sharply criticized the "red Tories" and a sudden hush fell over the previously noisy hall. After that, a large section of the delegates did no more applauding for him.

He returned to the theme during his speech to leave his point unmistakeably — he wanted no truck nor trade with "leftist" Tories. Sunday morning, the delegates all found at their hotel doors a formal statement from Hellyer — he wanted it to be known that he had intended every word of it and that the attack was no slip of the tongue.

Charles Joseph Clark, 36, new Conservative leader.

That may have shown great personal honesty but it did not show a finely tuned political sense. Hellyer offended delegates who are themselves as conservative as he is to the point that one of them went around storming: "Who is that ex-Liberal to tell us what to do? I'll become a red Tory myself."

Hellyer's attack did a good deal to polarize the convention but that would probably have happened in any case. The voting showed that Horner had solid support within the party. On both ballots on which he stayed in, he came fourth in the results and picked up some fresh support the second time. He was ahead of Flora MacDonald on both occasions and both of them are true representatives of opposite sides of their party.

It is worth analyzing the important second ballot, on which some names appeared because withdrawals were announced too late to be effective that time. Clark, John Fraser and Flora MacDonald received among them a total of 805 votes. Wagner, Horner, Hellyer and Pat Nowlan received a total of 1,113 votes. Probably a portion of each total should be attributed to the appeal of individual candidates to some delegates but the ideological implications are unmistakeable. Brian Mulroney's figure — 419 — does not appear in either total because he seems more in the middle of Conservative thought than the others.

Not all the delegates feel as strongly about the ideological rift in the party as Horner does. After all, Joe Clark is no flaming radical — he is a conservative man. But those to the right of him in his own party are numerous enough that, like Robert Stanfield, he faces a problem of reuniting the party. He has the advantage of approaching the issue when deep bitterness is far less widespread than it was when the battle of Diefenbaker's leadership was fresh.

By far the best speech of the convention was delivered by Stanfield, not by any of the candidates. His Friday evening address was full of substance, pertinent warnings to the country as well as to his party. He delivered it with eloquence. In part, he was cautioning both the Conservative party and the nation against extremism and against unnecessary confrontations. But with force and eloquence he was also warning his own party against disunity and cautioning them that if they are to play their obvious role in this country they will not do as a collection of splinter groups.

Change Wanted

Stanfield posed the vital questions, pointing out that the unmistakable import of recent Gallup polls is that the country is looking for a change of government. That may not be the case in two years but it is the only possible explanation of the huge undecided segment that is now showing up in polls. It is highly probable that the Conservatives will win the next election if they do as Stanfield says — devote themselves to winning public confidence in themselves and their leadership.

The question that remains is whether Joe Clark can do it. He is young but he has long political experience and young men win elections these days. The very strong support the convention gave Wagner should be helpful in proving to Quebec voters that some things have changed in the Conservative party. But we will have to wait and see whether he has the critical quality — the ability for form and lead a team. Without that he will only win if the Liberals effectively turn the country against themselves. With that quality, he could easily prove to be unbeatable.

American Wake

Many years ago when Irish emigrants were leaving Ireland for Canada and the U.S., it was the custom that all the friends and relatives went to the dockside to see them off to the new land. There on the quayside they held a big party, singing, dancing and drinking, until the big ship came to take the emigrant on board. Since communications and transport were slow at that time, the emigrant was never expected to return, so the dockside party was called the American wake.

We believe that there must be many elderly Irish people in this area who came to Canada over 50 years ago, and who participated in these concerts. We would welcome your assistance in locating some of these people, as we plan on holding an American wake on March 6 at the Imperial Inn, Victoria. We are interested only in those, who for one reason or another, never had the opportunity to return to Ireland even for a visit, or whose visits were few and far between.

On March 6 we will take them for a trip down memory lane, through the highways and byways of Ireland with an evening of Irish music and songs. This evening of nostalgia is being provided by our members free of charge to our Irish pioneers, and we look forward to hearing from as many as possible, as soon as possible, so that we may complete our arrangements for this entertaining evening — Jim O'Sullivan, president, Irish Canadian Cultural Association P.O. Box 1615, Victoria, B.C.

Modernize Laws

The picture in the papers Friday of prisoners holding hostages makes a mockery of the law. It puts the lives of all police officers in extreme danger. Antiquated laws should be modernized. Hard core prisoners should be separated. Officers spend many hours pursuing crime, only to have prisoners out on bail and back on the streets in a matter of hours. Shifting prisoners to other provinces, or issuing drugs on demand solves nothing. Lawyers should ride the patrol cars and see what officers are up against. Then perhaps we would have some teeth in the B.C. laws, and a liaison between officers and the people, instead of fear to speak out against wrongdoing by crinminals. — Anne V. Sherbrook, 1919 Davie Street.

Strathcona Park

The Alpine Club of Canada thanks you for your statement of position on the preservation of the south part of Strathcona Park. Your cartoon of Feb. 20 was accurate, but frightening in its depiction of the situation.

Of course, some desperate need for resource may predicate extraction of minerals. But have we come to the point where we must open areas of marginal mineralization to mining? Are we a society ready to sacrifice an area such as Della Falls, Big Interior Mountain, and Cream Lake to the degradation which unavoidably follows mining? We strongly suggest that we are not!

We are completely in sympathy with the stand of the Sierra Club in this issue. The reported 1,400 annual visitors hiking through the Marble Meadows sector of the park gives a minute indiction of the need for future parkland. We feel that the provincial government has a duty to her citizens not to give in to short term balance the budget" pressures, and not to yield this valuable and beautiful part of the park. — Gil Parker, Vancouver Section Chairman, Alpine Club of Canada, 78 Linden Avenue.

Bank Subversion

The Anti-Inflation Board regulations imposed upon the banks are too little, too mild, and too patronizing. The chartered banks, in particular, have to be disenfranchised as the comptrollers of the public purse and Canada must issue a new, debt-free currency.

The dogma of the International Monetary Fund, the federal reserve of the U.S. and the Canadian Bankers Association has to terminate. They personify subversion in Canada. — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of February 25, 1916

With the idea of co-operating with the Vancouver organizations, the Victoria city council, and board of trade, the Manufacturer's Association met yesterday afternoon in order to explore ways of securing war supply orders for this area. With regard to outfitting the troops, discrimination against the west is alleged. At a meeting in Vancouver this week, manufacturers contended that articles at higher prices than their tenders were being sent out from the east. It appears that B.C. manufacturers desire an allowance for freight rates, tendering exclusive of these onerous charges or else to limit B.C. soldiers' equipment to B.C. manufacturers.

The Ministers: Waterland

He Wants to Cut Powers of Office

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Tom Waterland, soft-spoken minister of mines, petroleum and forest resources, expects to be out of the trees when cabinet posts are reshuffled by Premier Bennett.

"It is completely up to the premier, of course, but I would be a little surprised if I were given the forest portfolio on a permanent basis," he said in an interview.

(Premier Bennett has said the cabinet will be reshuffled, leaving ministers with only one major portfolio each).

The mining post is an obvious place for Waterland to end up. He started life in the tiny mining town of Anyox, B.C., near Prince Rupert and his early years were a succession of mining communities.

His father was born in the United States and graduated in mining engineering at the University of Dakota. Waterland decided to go south of the border for his education, getting the same degree at the same university.

Waterland later settled in Kamloops. He joined the provincial department of mines as a district inspector in 1966, then in 1969 took three years out to work for a private mining contractor before returning to the civil service in 1972, just prior to the NDP election victory.

Ironically, it was a change brought in by the NDP government that enabled Waterland to seek political office while a civil servant and he defeated NDP cabinet minister Bill Hartley in Yale-Lillooet. Kamloops is not in the riding but Waterland was serving as district mine inspector in the Yale-Lillooet area.

Being elevated to the cabinet has been a big adventure but it poses problems. His wife is a teacher and his three teenaged daughters are in school at Kamloops and can not join him here until the end of June.

Backbenchers can rent for the few months they are in Victoria but cabinet ministers must live here, at least for most of the year.

"Victoria is a nice place but I will miss the skiing in Kamloops," Waterland said. "I really enjoyed the winters there."

At the moment he is living with his father-in-law, Larry Stewart, who was administrative assistant to Wesley Black, provincial secretary under W. A. C. Bennett.

Waterland had been to Victoria several times before the election, to visit his father-in-law, but had not seen the inside of the legislature until he was elected to it.

Now 42, the pipe-smoking newcomer to politics has some very definite ideas about mining and government.

Basically his approach is that governments should encourage, not obstruct, mining development.

TOM WATERLAND . . . out of the trees?

In terms of policy, he said, he is thinking along these lines:

• The 5 per cent royalty on metals should be scrapped. The coal royalty should be retained but placed on a floating basis to rise and fall with costs and prices.

• Discretionary powers of the mines minister should be greatly reduced. He feels companies are reluctant to expand because ministerial powers are too great, leaving firms uncertain about what the regulations really are.

• Americans and other foreign investors should be encouraged to put more money into B.C. mining. All investors, Canadian and foreign, should be welcome here.

• B.C. resource companies should be encouraged to expand now while markets are poor so they will be in a strong position when prices rise again.

• Provincial resource taxation should be based on profits, not production, and all rates should be announced in advance so companies can plan ahead.

• Oil companies should be encouraged to expand their refining capacity in B.C. The proposal for a government-owned refinery should be abandoned.

All these ideas will be presented to cabinet in hopes that they will become government policy, he said.

The ending of the metals royalty has a very high priority and probably will be acted upon first. Later, the government should float the coal royalty so it bears a direct relationship to profits. It probably would never go below the present level of $1.50 per ton but should only go up if the profit increases. The royalty should vary from company to company, depending upon costs. For example, an underground coal mine should have a lower royalty than a strip mine, because of higher production costs.

He said the NDP government made a mistake in discouraging foreign ownership of B.C. resource industries.

"I have no objection to foreign ownership. I would like to see more Canadian ownership but I don't think we will achieve that by discouraging foreign investment.

"We need the capital and it has to come from somewhere. If we want to own it ourselves we should encourage Canadians to become involved rather than discouraging foreign companies. The net result would be to discourage industry."

Their Language Has Been All Greek

By DUSKO DODER
The Washington Post

ATHENS — Greeks have long lived by a linguistic timetable of chaos. They speak the language of their ancestors as it was handed down through generations.

But the official language of modern Greece is an artificially created archaic tongue that approximates the one spoken in the ancient Hellenic world and that has to be learned in schools.

The existence of two languages and the fact that the official one is not understood by everybody has created a communications gap between the educated elite and the rest of the population. It has long been one of the most divisive political issues in Greece.

The government of Premier Constantine Karamanlis recently adopted sweeping education reforms designed to put an end to Greece's bilingualism in favor of the common tongue of the people, or Demotiki, which is now introduced as the sole language of education up to the university level.

Karamanlis' reforms are staggering in scope and involve a total overhaul of "all sectors of general, technical and professional education," including translations of all textbooks. As a consequence, Demotiki Greek will inevitably become the language of university education as well by the end of the decade.

Psychologically, the decision marks the end of a long struggle by progressive Greek educators against excessive nationalists who sponsored the artificially-made "Katharevusa" language as a symbol of tangible links between modern Greece and the glorious culture of the ancient Hellenic world.

Greek newspaper publishers and editors have been in the forefront of this struggle. In fact, Mrs. Helen Vlachos, publisher of several Athens dailies, was the first to introduce the common Demotiki language in the columns of her afternoon paper "Mesembrini" in 1961. Th editor of the paper at that time was Panayotis Lambrias, who is now minister of information in the Karamanlis cabinet.

But the movement for educational reform was halted by the military junta that took power in 1967. The military rulers insisted that the synthetic "Katharevusa" continue as Greece's official language and the army general staff put together a new grammar book that became an obligatory textbook for all schools.

An outsider might find it improbable that the question of language in a homogeneous nation could become an explosive political issue and lead — as it frequently did — to street fights and riots. However, the problem is deeply rooted in tortuous Greek history, especially in the nation's four centuries of occupation by Turkey, a period when all Greek thought and education went into an eclipse. During the Turkish rule the cultivation of Greek thought and language was confined to a few monasteries. The language used by various clergymen — prominent among them being Kyrilos Lukaris and Nikiphoros Theotokis — was a modernized form of the ancient Greek. The basis of that language was the so-called "Alexandrian common," the tongue that evolved from the three forms of ancient Greek during the time of Alexander the Great.

VLACHOS
. . . pioneer

In the Hellenic world, Alexandrian common was the language of the civilized peoples and was subsequently taken over by the Byzantine Empire.

The Katharevusa language, which was adopted as Greece's official language after the nation's successful war of liberation from Turkey nearly 150 years ago, is based on the Alexandrian common. It appealed to Greek nationalists because it was akin to the ancient Greek and was not adulterated by foreign expressions.

Its defenders even today argue that the Katharevusa, although a synthetic language with a very difficult grammar and punctuation rules, is rich in scientific concepts and provides for great exactness in rendering complex relationships.

Demotiki, however, is a peasant tongue developed by the Greek peoples over the past centuries. Because of general illiteracy, this development was somewhat haphazard and Demotiki is rich in descriptive terms but lacks scientific concepts and precision. Moreover, it is saturated with Turkish, Italian and other foreign words accepted by the people during their life with Turks, Italians and other invaders.

The lingustic dichotomy, Lambrias said in an interview recently, reflects a base "hypocrisy" in Greek life.

"You speak with your friends and family in one language, then you go make a speech in another and half the audience doesn't know precisely what you are talking about," he said.

The movement for educational reforms, championed by Athens University Prof. Dimitrios Vernardakis, started in the past century. But nationalist forces have strongly opposed any changes. As late as early 1960s, there were street riots in Athens over this issue.

Partial reforms were instituted in 1928, when Demotili was introduced as a subject into the first four grades of primary schools. Until today, however, Katharevusa is used in all higher grades, the exception being Greek literature classes — since most Greek writers in this century wrote in Demotiki. Supporters of Karamanlis' reforms claim that the orthography, grammar and syntax of Katharevusa are so complex and convoluted that there are only a handful of highly educated Greeks who could be said to have mastered the tongue.

The philosophical principle underlying the Concorde is that progress consists in going places twice as fast. By cutting trans-Atlantic travel time in half, Concorde makes it possible to have breakfast in London, take off at 8 a.m. and arrive in New York at 6 a.m., in time for another breakfast. Opponents of progress argue that this is no progress at all; since the traveller could have stayed in London and had a second breakfast right there without the added expense of flying the Atlantic. This is a silly argument.

The progress, which it speciously ignores, lies in the fact that Concorde gets the traveller out of the messy business of having to wash the breakfast dishes. They can be left in the sink at London with the justification that he must hurry to catch the Concorde, and at New York he can pass up the American breakfast, with its concomitant stack of egg-stained plates, by using the argument that he has already eaten in London.

When all routes become supersonic, as surely they will, he can then get out of doing all sorts of dishes. Let's suppose he stops an hour at New York to pass up the East Coast breakfast, thus getting out of his second batch of breakfast dishwashing in less than four hours, and hops the 7 a.m. Concorde for California.

He arrives at Los Angeles at 5:30 a.m., much too early to have breakfast. Once again, he gets out of doing breakfast dishes. Having been five hours and a half in transit, however, he is ready for lunch.

Lunch-time in California, unfortunately, is still hours away, and it will do no good to fly to Hawaii. If he catches the 6 a.m. to Honolulu, he will arrive at the islands at 4:30 a.m., too early even to get breakfast.

The trick is to fly back to New York., The 7 a.m. Concorde will put him there at 11:30 a.m., the very start of the lunch hour. Allowing an hour to eat and an hour to wash the lunch dishes, he can still catch the 1:30 p.m. Concorde back to London. It arrives at 9:30 p.m., when the last of the dinner dishes are just being dried and put back in the cupboard. Thanks to Concorde, he has gotten out of washing three sets of breakfast dishes and one grease-clotted batch of dinner dishes.

This may not seem like much progress, considering the cost, but we must bear in mind that Concorde is only a primitive machine foreshadowing faster days to come. As opponents of Concorde point out, it makes little sense to cross the Atlantic in three hours if takes another three hours to travel from the airport to Manhatten.

Progress requires a 50 per cent cut in the time needed to go every place. If the principle that faster is better is faithfully followed, we shall soon get to the office twice as fast, travel twice as fast on elevators, walk twice as fast to the corner drugstore, vacation twice as fast, and so on.

This will inexorably force us to fall in love, marry, reproduce and divorce twice as fast, and to rise to the top of the ladder twice as fast.

A world geared for the twice-as-fast life will be filled with people who have lived entire 65-year lifetimes in 32½ years. These people will look forward to years and years and years of leisure time, which they will doubtless use to create new schemes for using the Condorde to get out of washing dishes.

Engineering will not stop the Concorde, however. Progress can never cease. Eventually, machines will be built to move us at four times the speed of sound, then 10 times the speed of sound.

It will be possible to take off at London at 8 a.m., with the unwashed breakfast dishes still warm in the sink, thus rendering the trip completely pointless. Humanity will not put up with this.

It will demand more progress, and technology will finally give us a plane on which we can take off from London at 8 a.m., fly westward around the world and arrive back at London 30 minutes before we ate breakfast to find the dishes still undirtied in the cupboard.

In this era, of course, life will be moving at such a pace that 3-year-olds will be long-forgotten has-beens, and the cry for more progress will be irresistible.

The French, I believe, will be the people who will provide it. One day a great French visionary, a new De Gaulle, will declare that progress consists in going places very slowly. He will unwrap a miracle of French engineering. It will be a boat a thousand feet long, which contains the finest restaurant on earth and travels no faster than 35 miles an hour. It will be called the SS France.

This is the ultimate goal of modern progress toward which the Concorde now points us. What a pity that most of us alive today will not live to see it.

Power Fight 'Threat to Welfare'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's social welfare programs are in danger of being crippled because of a power struggle within government and large corporations, David Lewis, former federal New Democratic Party leader said Tuesday.

Lewis told about 150 people at the University of British Columbia that politicians and corporate citizens alike are playing on the prejudices of Canadians rather than thinking of the well-being of the disadvantaged.

"The growth of social good is much more important than the country's gross national product," he said. "The major purpose of society is to help people who need help obtain the help they need."

Instead, Lewis said, the issue of high costs for welfare programs has become more one of a redistribution of power rather than the costs or abuses of the programs.

"We must struggle to retain the programs without them being crippled," he said.

"And it will be a struggle against the total system rather than merely against the prejudices of politicians, pundits and editorialists."

Lewis, who stepped down as federal NDP leader after being defeated in his York South constituency in Toronto in the 1974 federal election, also blamed the media for perpetrating the belief that there are massive abuses of welfare programs.

He said there are no abuses in medicare and hospital insurance unless it is believed that "people are playing sick," and the reason unemployment insurance costs are so high is because seven per cent of the Canadian labor force is out of work.

"It is the public policy (government) that has created a high level of unemployment," said Lewis, now a political economist at Carleton University in Ottawa. "There is only one parasite that is costing us money and that is public policy."

Dispute Retards Aviation In U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — An intra-government dispute on what approach should be taken to international airline travel is preventing the United States from taking the lead in aviation that it should be providing, an International Air Transport Association (IATA) conference was told Tuesday.

Stuart G. Tipton, senior vice-president with Pan American World Airways, said the U.S. department of justice and the president's council of economic advisers favor unfettered competition among the international airlines while U.S. agencies more intimately associated with airline travel recognize the prevailing trend towards increasing regulation.

Tipton said William Coleman, U.S. transportation secretary, has said that there is need for such economic and political accommodation in aviation, which is the most highly regulated form of international transportation.

He said if Coleman's viewpoint was shared by more people, the U.S. could try and limit capacity growth to improve utilization of aircraft, filling more seats with fare-paying passengers.

Tipton said improved utilization has a direct effect on profits and offers one way of holding down fare increases.

N. VANCOUVER MAYOR SOURED BY LOST CAR

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Reid says that if council doesn't want him to drive, the city isn't going to get as much work out of him in future.

Reid was reacting to council's decision to dispense with a car owned by the city but used by the mayor for personal and business use. The city also paid operating expenses of the car.

Council voted 5 to 2 to sell the vehicle, calling it a frill which comes out of the pockets of taxpayers.

Reid said he has no intention of buying a car and will use public transit on most occasions.

Reid said council will save $1,000 through sale of the car, but has deprived him of $5,000 in benefits.

"They're getting steak at hamburger prices," said the disgruntled mayor. "It's petty politics."

Council is simply "picking the fly manure out of the pepper," he added.

Teamsters Report Progress In Talks With Trucking Firms

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Teamsters Union spokesman said Tuesday that some progress has been made following a day of contract talks with Transport Labor Relations, representing 97 trucking firms in the Vancouver and Nanaimo areas.

Both sides met on their own Tuesday after mediator Ken Albertini filed his report on the dispute.

Union spokesman Doug McLeod said talks will continue today and Thursday.

The contract covering 5,500 teamsters expired Dec. 31.

McLeod said Sunday the latest offer was rejected because freight handlers now are getting 75 cents more an hour than cartage workers.

Until the previous two-year contract, workers in both categories were paid the same, he said.

TLRA has offered the union a one-year increase of 10 per cent which it says is the maximum permitted by the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

The unions has said it would accept the 10-per-cent offer but first the 75 cents difference between freight handlers and cartage workers must be caught up.

Under the previous contract, warehousemen earned $6.15 an hour, pickup drivers received $6.40 an hour and semi-trailer drivers got $6.50 an hour.

800 Enter Contest

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Art Council will be given about 800 entries today in the city's Habitat billboard contest for judging.

Sam Fogel, contest chairman, said Tuesday the category winners will probably be seltected today by the panel of 10 judges, however, the decisions will be kept until city council have seen the results and preparations are made for a public announcement ceremony by the city in a week to 10 days.

Closing date for the contest was Monday. The public was invited to draw or paint "what Habitat means to me."

Winning designs will be shown on billboards throughout the city during the United nations' Habitat Conference on the Human Environment May 31 to June 11.

Fishboat Harbor On Lulu Island

RICHMOND (CP) — Municipal council has voted to locate a one-thousand-vessel fishboat harbor on the south shore of Lulu Island near Steveston, the traditional centre of the Fraser River fishing fleet.

The decision was made after council's planning committee recommended the location. The committee had wanted the harbor to be located on Steveston Island, but after protests at last week's council meeting changed its recommendation.

Environmental groups and concerned citizens want Steveston Island to remain in its natural state. Both said land and buildings are already available around Steveston.

The harbor will be built by the federal government and still needs approval of various federal bodies.

Son's Murder Trial Opens

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Otto Joseph Horvath, 17, of Burnaby, went on trial Tuesday charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment for the fatal beating of his mother, Anna, 37. The woman was found beaten to death last June 16. Special testimony was presented before the trial's official opening by Dr. Campbell J. Coady who said the woman died of brain injuries. Mr. Justice J. G. Gould of the British Columbia Supreme Court dismissed the jury of 12 until Friday while deciding upon admissibility of certain evidence.

Old Labor Quarrel Settled

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A labor relations board hearing ended Tuesday with both the Thompson-Nicola Regional District and the Canadian Union of Public Employees agreeing to a voluntary settlement for a dispute that began last June. Both parties agreed to drop all charges related to the dispute and the regional district dropped a decertification application filed against CUPE last year. About a dozen union members were affected. Charges of unfair labor practices launched by the district against environmentalist Cam Murray and CUPE Business Agent Bill Ferguson also were dropped. Ruth Norberg, a secretary to the district, was reinstated and an undisclosed cash settlement was awarded to planner Larry Wolfe who had since found employment elsewhere.

Murder Charge to Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — William Joseph Mahan, 33, of Vancouver was committed Tuesday for trial on a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment. Andrew Watt, 43, was stabbed about 20 times with a knife during a drinking party Jan. 11 at a Vancouver house.

John Hayes for Victoria City Alderman

WHY WILL JOHN HAYES MAKE A GOOD ALDERMAN?

John and his wife, Sharie, have lived in Victoria for seven years. Both feel strongly that the quality of life here should be preserved and improved for the benefit of our children and grandchildren.

John Hayes is a UBC graduate with a diploma in Appraisal/Urban Land economics. as a professional appraiser and property manager, he has demonstrated practical expertise in urban land use.

JOHN HAYES — "By and large the numerous assistance programs have been poorly advertised and as a general observation we would like to suggest to the City that they have someone assemble the facts on these programs so that one person can provide all the information on request. Most suitable for this project appears to be the rental housing subsidization programs by the Federal government (up to $7,500 per suite per month). Neighbourhood improvement grants are also available to the City from the Federal Government. Use of such funds in the purchase of small key parcels for miniature parks and street beautification (eg. View Street) would be a real stimulant to development (Excerpt from report to the City of Victoria Central Business District Advisory Committee on Central Neighbourhood Summary Report).

Welfare Aid Lacking, Private Hospitals Close

VANCOUVEDR (CP) — Richmond and Delta private hospitals will close March 31, with a combined loss of 129 beds, because of lack of adequate government payment for welfare cases, a hospitals' spokesman said Tuesday.

Larry Page of Davis and Company, solicitor for the Private Hospitals Labor Relations Association, said King George private hospital in Surrey, Florence Nightingale hospital in Surrey, Grandview private hospital in Vancouver and Parkridge hospital in Maple Ridge also are considering closure. He said about 286 beds would be affected.

Page said most of the hospitals have 50 per cent welfare cases, with Delta having 90 per cent.

Private hospitals received $17.26 a day from June, 1974, for welfare patients to Jan. 1, 1976, and $18.98 from Jan. 1, 1976, to date.

Page said the welfare rates for private hospitals should be compared with those in public extended care hospitals that range from "a low of $29.35 a day . . . up to $37.35 a day."

He said another problem is a retroactive contract with the Hospital Employees' Union that provided a modest increase but one that many hospitals cannot afford.

Joseph Weiler, a law professor at the University of British Columbia, presented the binding arbitration first-contract award to employees at five of the private hospitals in January.

The contract, retroactive to July 1, 1975, continues until June 30 of this year with retroactive pay to staff members due this month.

Weiler said the award left employees at private hospitals far behind comparable wage rates paid at public hospitals in the province and, in some cases, earning only slightly more than the B.C. minimum wage of $2.75 an hour.

Page said six other hospitals have begun bargaining with HEU, and even if they settle on the Weiler arbitration "it will still be too expensive."

Autoplan'76

AN EXPLANATION OF THE FINE PRINT

READING TIME 4½ MINUTES

This year your Autoplan Insurance has undergone some major changes. Now it's possible for you to buy more protection or less, to pay for it in a convenient manner, and we have initiated special categories for senior citizens and the handicapped. One fundamental fact must be remembered however: The motorist ultimately sets the rates . . . the more accidents, and the more severe the accident the higher the premiums.

WHAT DO I HAVE TO BUY?

The basic Autoplan '76 protection is third party legal liability coverage of $50,000 and no-fault accident benefits.

All licenced vehicles will carry at least this minimum coverage.

CAN I BUY MORE PROTECTION?

This year Autoplan '76 offers you more choices than we ever did, all on an optional basis. For example:

Additional Third Party Legal Liability:
You can increase your basic third party legal liability coverage to $100,000, $200,000, $300,000, $500,000 or $1 million. And even higher limits are available from your agent, the MVB or a Corporation Sales Office.

Specified Peril Coverage:
This is a limited form of protection and includes fire, theft, windstorm and lightning, and is available with a $50 deductible.

Comprehensive Coverage:
This covers damage from any cause other than Collision or Upset, subject to a $50 deductible.

Collision Coverage:
This is available in combination with Comprehensive, and depending upon the Type or Use of your vehicle you have a choice of four deductible combinations:
$100 Collision and $50 Comprehensive deductible.
$200 Collision and $50 Comprehensive deductible.
$300 Collision and $100 Comprehensive deductible.
$500 Collision and $150 Comprehensive deductible.
Other options are available for special Type or Use of vehicles.

HOW DO I DECIDE WHAT TO BUY?

Your independent Autoplan Agent, Motor Vehicle Branch Office, or Corporation Sales Office is the place to go to get advice on what is the proper purchase for you. Approximately 900 offices are available throughout the Province to assist you.

They will also advise you what Use Class you should be in. An error in this classification could affect your ability to collect full benefits if you have a claim.

Changes have been made in coverage regarding the equipment you may have on your car, such as tape decks, or special paint finishes; your agent can advise you about these changes as well.

HOW MUCH WILL MY INSURANCE COST THIS YEAR?

The premium rates have been set to permit the Corporation to run as a breakeven operation. The rates are set based on the claims made by each Use Class.

For basic coverage, which is mandatory, the basic rates are:

ALL PRIVATE PASSENGER/LIGHT TRUCKS COVERAGE—LIABILITY—$50,000 INCLUDING ACCIDENT BENEFITS

Area Example	Vehicle Use Examples* 1	2	3	4
Victoria	$ 99	$119	$158	$296
Fraser Valley	102	123	164	306
Southern Interior	104	125	166	311
North Island	113	136	181	338
Northern B.C.	114	137	183	342
Lower Mainland	137	165	220	411

Your Insurance Agent, MVB, or Corporation Sales Office can quote you the exact rates for any additional coverage you may want. There are many different combinations that depend on the coverage you need, where you live, value of your vehicle, how the vehicle will be used and so on.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I DON'T HAVE ENOUGH MONEY TO PAY FOR MY INSURANCE?

The Corporation has established a special installment plan that will help ease the burden on the motoring public. All that is required is a 25% down payment on the total insurance premium, and three installments payable at two month intervals. The interest rate will be 13% simple interest per annum on the outstanding balance. The minimum amount that will be financed is $100. Licence plates cannot be included in the finance plan. There will be a $4.00 minimum finance charge payable to the Insurance Corporation.

WHAT ELSE IS THE CORPORATION DOING TO HELP PEOPLE WHO MAY HAVE DIFFICULTY PAYING THE PREMIUMS?

Two special categories have been created to meet the needs of the senior citizen and the handicapped who own vehicles with hand controls. If you are 65 or over and own a vehicle that you drive just for pleasure you are entitled to a 25% discount on your basic mandatory premium. If your car or light truck is equipped with approved hand operated driving controls designed for the handicapped you qualify for a 25% discount on the basic mandatory premium. A vehicle owner cannot qualify for both discounts.

Your Autoplan agent, the MVB or the Corporation Sales Office can assist you with these and other details of the plan.

All Autoplan Renewal Forms have been mailed. The optional extension coverage shown on your form is for guidance only. You can purchase any extension coverage you desire, or none at all. If you haven't received your renewal form take your current 1975 owner's certificate and see your agent, MVB or Corporation Sales Office. The deadline for renewing is February 29. Give yourself time to ask about the changes and the many options now available.

*VEHICLE USE EXAMPLES

1. Pleasure (Class 01 and 201). In this class the vehicle must not be driven by anyone under age 25. The vehicle must be used for pleasure only and not driven to or part way to work. The principal driver must be a woman or a married man age 25 or over or a single man age 30 or over.
2. Pleasure and Driving to Work (Class 02 and 202). The same conditions apply as for 01 and 201 except that the vehicle can be driven to or part way to work.
3. Business (Class 03 and 203). A vehicle in this class may be used for business as well as pleasure providing it is driven mainly by a female, or a married male, or a single man age 25 or over. It may be driven up to 20% of the total mileage by single males under age 25.
4. Under 25 Single Male Owner (Class 04 and 204). This is the class that is required for single males who are under age 25 and are the owner or principal operator of the vehicle.

UNDER 25 SINGLE MALE VEHICLE OWNERS MAY PARTICIPATE IN THE B.C. GOVERNMENT'S SAFE DRIVING DIVIDEND PROGRAM.

If accident free and not more than five demerit points in 1976, this group will qualify for a 25% rebate.

A. Grossed-up dividends are shown as taxable amount of dividends from Taxable Canadian Corporations in Box (B) on T5 slips. See item 46 of your 1975 Tax Guide.

Q. I made a donation to a federal political party. This party also has a provincial organization in Ontario. Can I claim the Ontario Political Tax Credit?

A. No Contributions made to a Federal party are deductible only from Federal Tax Payable. Similarly, contributions to an Ontario party are deductible only frrom Ontario Provincial Tax Payable.

Q. Is the amount of the deduction which may be transferred from my wife in addition to my own deduction? For iinstance, if I could transfer $400.00 of her Pension Income Deduction, would the deduction be in additin to my $930.00 deduction or am I limited to $1,000.00 in total?

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Copper Corporation reports a substantial drop in mining earnings in 1975.

Net earnings were reported at $2,390,081 or 38.2 cents a share compared with $9,745,923 or $1.52 a share (after 14 cents a share loss in an extraordinary item) in 1974.

Concentrate revenue was $24,873,430 in 1975 compared with $40,349,775 in 1974.

President Patrick Reynolds said the average price receive for a pound of copper in 1975 was about 57 cents compared with 91 cents in 1974. The cost to produce a pound of copper was 51 cents and, when exploration and development costs were added, the total was 53 cents.

"The result was that earnings from mining operations before taxes fell from $15,377,564 in 1974 to $2,016,069 in 1975.

"After provision for provincial taxes of $1,333,826 and federal income tax of $409,937, together totalling 86½ per cent, the net amount remaining was $272,306 (versus $7,824,436 in 1974).

"Interest income after taxes thereon brought the net profit for the year to $2,390,081 or 38.2 cents per share," Reynolds said.

Xerox

Xerox Corp.'s net income declined 26 per cent in 1975, the year it withdrew from the computer business, the company reports. It was the first year-to-year earnings decline since 1951.

Net income amounted to $244.3 million or $3.07 per share in 1975, compared with $329.3 million or $4.14 a share in 1974.

"The modest profit decline in 1975 resulted from inflation, the costs of putting into production and marketing two major products and the sluggish worldwide economy," chairman Peter McColough and president Archie McCardell said.

Power

Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for 1975 of $36.4 million or $2.73 a share compared with $37.8 million, or $2.88 a share in 1974.

Gross revenues for the year totalled $293.1 million, compared with $223.5 million in 1974.

Gulf

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for 1975 of $176.6 million or $3.88 a share, compared with $161 million or $3.54 a share for the previous year.

The improvement was credited to higher production profits, reflecting increased revenues from natural gas.

Net sales and other operating revenues totalled $1,701 million, an increase of $224 million over 1974.

A company spokesman said the price freezes following the $1.50 increase in crude oil prices July 1 precluded the recovery of funds required to finance the replacement of inventories.

Scott Paper

Scott Paper Ltd. reports 1975 net earnings of $2,959,448 or $3.70 a share, up from $2,939,578 or $3.67 a share in 1974. The company experienced a 15 per cent increase in sales to $84,628,834 from $73,570,647.

The company blames an work stoppage by about 550 employees at its New Westminster paper mill and inflation for limited earnings growth.

GM

General Motors of Canada Ltd. reports net income for 1975 of $111 million, a 4.8 per cent increase over the $106 million earned in 1974, but down 2.3 per cent from the record $114 million established in 1973.

Factory sales of cars, trucks and buses, which include units made for the United States market, fell seven per cent to 595,000 units from 642,000 in 1974.

GM said this reflected a decrease in U.S. demand.

The company sold 258,000 units imported from the U.S. Of the total produced and imported, 515,000 were sold in Canada, 290,000 shipped to the U.S. and 48,000 exported to 67 other countries.

Laurentide

Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $5.5 million or $1.04 a share in 1975, up from $3.8 million or 60 cents a share in 1974.

Consolidated finance receivables, net of unearned finance income, totalled $388 million at year-end, up nine per cent from $356 million at the end of 1974.

Eugene Lindberg, president and chief executive officer, said in the annual report the Canadian economy appears to be moving toward recovery following the economic upturn evident in other major industrialized countries.

Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a common share, payable March 31, to shareholders of record March 9.

Denison

Denison Mines Ltd. reports substantial increases in sales and earnings for 1975 over last year, the fourth consecutive year company's earnings have increased.

Net earnings for 1975 increased to $26,518,000, or $5.80 a share, compared to 1974 earnings of $12,692,000, or $2.78 a share.

Income and mining taxes paid by Denison totalled $24,907,000 for 1975, a 345 per cent increase over the previous year.

In the annual report, Stephen Roman, chairman and chief executive officer, said a major factor in the rise in earnings was the delivery of an initial two million pounds of urnium to Empresa Nacional Del Uranio of Spain.

The report says uranium customers are making advance payments to assure development of Denison's Elliot Lake mine. During 1975, the company received advance payments of $41,000,000 from customers in Spain and Japan.

Finning

Finning Tractor and Equipment Ltd. reports net income for 1975 increased nine per cent from 1974, to $7,942,000 or $2 a share from $7,286,000 or $1.85.

Total revenue was $173.8 million, up 7.2 per cent from the $162.1 million in 1974.

W. M. Young, board chairman and chief executive officer, attributed increased profit to decreased borrowing costs, and a lower income tax rate.

Cyprus

Earnings of Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. fell to $20,575,000 or $2.70 a share from $25,886,000 or $3.40 a share last year, directors of the Vancouver-based company report.

They also announced the company has been asked to defer to 1977 delivery of 20 per cent of 1976 contractual quantities of zinc and nine per cent of lead quantities.

Cyprus president John Bruk of Vancouver said the deferrals followed requests by the company's Japanese customers for substantial cutbacks in deliveries.

Rather than cutting back sales, Cyprus won the delivery deferrals. It also obtained an increase in lead treatment charges to "a level more comparable with current market conditions," Bruk said.

Preliminary profit report shows that sales of lead in concentrates were up 37.4 per cent, to 264,943,000 pounds from $192,743,000 pounds, sales of zinc in concentrate rose 45.9 per cent, to 253,874,000 pounds from 174,034,000 pounds and silver in concentrates was up 36.1 per cent to $3,335,000 ounces from 2,451,000 ounces.

The average price of zinc remained steady at 37.1 cents a pound. The price of lead fell to 18.3 cents a pound from 26.8 cents and the price of silver to $4.34 an ounce from $4.77.

Total value of metals in concentrates for the year rose to $157 million from $127 million.

B of M

The Bank of Montreal reports after-tax balance of revenue of $28 million, or 82 cents a share, for the first quarter ended Jan. 31, compared with $18.6 million, or 35 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Total assets Jan. 21 were $18.7 billion, up $400 million during the first quarter.

F. H. McNeil, chairman and chief executive officer, said that the gain in revenue from the increase in assets was more than offset by a narrowing in interest rate spreads during the first quarter, marginally higher operating expenses and a decrease in other operating revenue.

Net interest revenue, the bank's major source of income, was up 23 per cent in the first quarter.

Sluggish Cap Firm Now Booming

TEULON, Man. (CP) — The Szumlanski family is tipping its hat proudly these days after transforming a sluggish cap manufacturing business into one brimming with growth potential.

Frank Szumlanski and his sons Andy, Barry and Stephen took over control of the old Dominion Hat and Cap Co. of Winnipeg in 1971 after it recorded a 1970 profit of just $5,000.

Last year Promo Wear — the company's new name — had sales of $1.7 million, nearly nine times the 1970 figure for Dominion, and recorded undisclosed profits many times the 1970 figure.

The Szumlanski's began their re-organization program by moving the company plant from "a typical sweatshop" on the second floor of an old building in Winnipeg and eventually into a plant here that Andy calls "one of the most modern cap manufacturing operations in the world."

The 22,000-square-foot plant has been turning out abut 6,000 cotton peaked, adjustable caps daily since it was opened last September.

The lined, thermal-foam, promotional caps are sold primarily to agricultural and construction companies and account for about 75 per cent of Promo Wear's business. The remaining 25 per cent stems from an accessory line of jackets, T-shirts, toques and hard hats.

When the family took over the business in 1970 following the death of Andy's partner, their first building consisted of a dozen employees and 11 machines. Their first move to Tuelon was to a 600-foot leased building that had 35 workers and 30 machines. Today they employ about 90 employees working with 86 machines.

The employees are being paid under a bonus incentive system in addition to receiving a base rate at least 20 per cent above the Manitoba minimum hourly wage of $2.60.

But the most dramatic change since the family takeover was their decision to produce just one promotional cap of one fabric in an adjustable size.

In April, 1975, they shipped their last hats to retail stores and moved full-scale into manufacturing caps and supplying accessories to industries only.

Dominion Cap had been producing 30 styles of dress and casual caps in 10 sizes of 50 fabrics and colors. Through several partnerships during its 25-year existence, Dominion had never advanced much beyond the financial break-even position.

Brothers Andy and Barry, involved with the business since the family's official acquisition in January, 1971, both agree the key element that enabled them to reverse the company trend and make Promo a success was obtaining a broader and more flexible credit line from the Royal Bank of Canada.

"That was the turning point and it has been uphill all the way," said Andy, adding the flexible credit line contributed to their ability to increase business nearly 50 per cent the first year.

Another major development came with the introduction of Andy to a United States consultant who convinced him the road to efficient production lay in the purchase of new machinery to increase the daily output to 4,000 caps daily from the 1,200 then being manufactured.

"Sales have skyrocketed and our manufacturing division is chasing trying to keep up with sales," Andy now says.

The company expects to manufacture more than one million caps this year and foresees huge increases in exports to the U.S., Australia, England and the Soviet Union.

A far cry from what Andy calls the "old dungeon days on McDermot Street where we had to spray for cockroaches at least once a week."

DOMAN EYES SPLIT

DUNCAN (CP) — Doman Industries Ltd. announced Monday it will seek shareholder approval at its annual meeting here March 31 for a 2-for-1 stock split.

Company treasurer Jack Abercombie said the move was in response to a recent improvement in lumber market conditions and production as well as improved performance of the company shares on the stock market.

The shares were split 3-for-1 in 1969, four years after the company went public and were split 2-for-1 in 1973.

Current shares have been approaching a historical high of $12 recently on the Toronto and Vancouver exchanges.

If approval is forthcoming, there will be about 6.5 million common shares outstanding, Abercrombie said.

'Doman Industries' subsidiaries are engaged in retail and wholesale merchandising of lumber and related building supplies, contract freight hauling, logging, lumber, remanufacturing, land development, lumber exporting, concrete ready mix and related products. The company has operations in B.C., the Yukon, Washington and Oregon.

Carnival Kidnapping Caper

OTTAWA (CP) — As part of a student prank for the University of Ottawa's law school winter carnival Tuesday night, Progressive Conservative MP Roch LaSalle agreed to disappear for five hours in a mock kidnapping.

The prank by a few French-speaking law students included English-language letters sent to area radio stations which said:

"Frog LaSalle is still alive.

"Don't worry, he'll be returned to his primitive French Frog nation.

"But be sure he will be in a very bad shape."

Police, who took initial reports of the apparent kidnapping seriously, were on hand at the university at about 10:15 p.m. when LaSalle was presented to the audience at a carnival event.

The stout MP was smiling broadly and smoking a cigarette as he appeared on stage wrapped in a rope together with two reporters.

He said the caper began at his parliamentary office when law students arrived at about 4:30 p.m. to take him to the university for what he was told was a discussion on capital punishment.

Instead, the students took him to an apartment near the university and told him of the prank. LaSalle said he was surprised but agreed to go along after they told him it was to end at the carnival event scheduled for 10 p.m.

One of the students said they decided on the caper in part because they were disappointed in the result of last weekend's Conservative leadership convention, especially the defeat of Quebec candidate Claude Wagner.

The student said the prank and the messages were intended to cause a reaction among English and French Canadians, but when pressed to explain, he declined.

Pie-in-the-Eye No Joke

PALISADES PARK, N.J. — A Fort Lee woman who was hit in the face with a pie got the last laugh when she accepted a $5,000 out-of-court settlement to drop her punitive damage suit.

Marlene Blum, a receptionist, was at her desk last May 20 when two young women walked in, showed her a business card for Pie In the Eye Inc., and one of them tossed the pie. The pair had been hired by Mrs. Blum's co-workers.

Mrs. Blum's lawyer said the woman suffered a burning sensation in her eyes, was forced to quit her job and has been seeing a psychiatrist because of nervousness.

The pie throwers pleaded guilty to assault and were fined $50 each.

Mrs. Blum's co-workers have agreed to pay the $5,000.

LAS VEGAS — Engineering student Steve McPeak was spending Tuesday night in a hammock slung under a cable 700 feet above the Colorado River, hoping to make his way into the Guinness book of world records for a lengthy stay on a high wire.

Ignoring police orders to return to earth, McPeak scaled a cableway a few yards downstream from the world-famous Hoover Dam early Monday, and has spent his time strolling up and down the wire, waving to tourists on top of the dam and chatting to passing truckers on a citizens' band radio.

LOS ANGELES — Bill Haley and the Comets, a pioneer rock n' roll band, was sued for $250,000 Tuesday by Sandra Shekell, the group's manager.

The Comets signed a three-year contract with her in 1973, she said, alleging the musicians consistently negotiated contracts without paying her commission and charged almost $250,000 in expenses to her.

The band, which recorded the hits "Rock Around the Clock" and "See You Later Alligator" in the 1950s, has been based in Mexico City since the mid-1960s. The lawsuit said Haley and the Comets now were living in Veracruz, Mexico.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Russian ballet star Rudolf Nureyev has been released from a hospital here after recovering from bronchial pneumonia.

Double Trouble

ROME (AP) — Giuseppe Montegrande, in jail awaiting trial on robbry charges, has been replaced by a look-alike younger brother.

Jail officials said Giuseppe, 19, was visited Monday by his father, mother, fiancee and 16-year-old brother Luigi. After a long and animated conversation, everyone left but Luigi, who remained behind dressed as his brother.

When the guards discovered the ruse, it was too late to trace Guiseppe. They kept Luigi on charges of impersonating his brother and assisting in his escape.

Horner Offered Key Tory Post

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Joe Clark, still moving rapidly to heal convention wounds, yesterday offered Jack Horner a senior position in the Progressive Conservative shadow cabinet.

Horner is expected to take up his responsibilities, probably as transportation spokesman, in about 12 days.

He left Ottawa immediately after his meeting with Clark on a short business trip to his ranch and a short vacation.

Both Clark and Horner were reported to be well satisfied with 11 o'clock meeting between the two Albertans.

Clark was reported to have made it clear he wants Horner on his Tory team and considers him a valuable political asset as well as a talented parliamentarian.

However, as a senior spokesman for the party, Horner would be expected to co-operate closely with his colleagues.

Horner had stated before the meeting that he would be happy to serve under Clark, so long as the new leader did not move the party away from Horner's Conservative positions.

Apparently both were satisfied.

The olive branch was promised in other places as well.

Several Conservatives who fought hard ab ainst Clark's election as leader, indicated they were ready to co-operate fully with him.

One Western MP, who voted for Claude Wagner on the last ballot Sunday, said he had written a congratulatory letter to Clark and offered him full co-operation.

Another, bitter about Clark's election Sunday, said: "Maybe it is all for the best. At least Clark was never a Liberal and doesn't have any questions asked about his finances."

A third western MP said he doubted that there would be any further statements such as those by Roch LaSalle (Jolliette) who said Monday he would not run in another election, after the party had refused the leadership to a French-speaking Canadian.

"I think we have come to terms with Clark's election," the westerner said. "As long as he will listen to our views and not try to move the party farther left we can pull together."

Sean O'Sullivan (Hamilton-Wentworth) and Peter Bawden (Calgary South), who were anti-Clark on Sunday, were prepared to return to wars with the Liberals yesterday.

"If Mr. Clark is ready to work with us, we are ready to live with him," O'Sullivan said.

Bawden admitted he had been disappointed Sunday, but this is another day. "I'm anxious to get to work on beating Trudeau," he stated.

Hardened Convicts Caused Unrest

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A senior Millhaven Penitentiary official told a federal inquiry Tuesday that the entire atmosphere at the prison changed when a group of hard-core convicts were transferred there last November.

The official was testifying before an inquiry headed by federal prison ombudsman Inger Hansen, who is investigating an incident last Nov. 3 in which several prisoners locked in segregation cells were sprayed with tear gas.

Reporters have been admitted to the hearings on the condition that witnesses not be identified.

The official said the presence of the segregated prisoners, mostly hardened convicts kept isolated from the rest of the population, caused unrest in the penitentiary. There was tension and unease among guards and prisoners alike.

He said the unrest lifted shortly after the tear-gas incident when between 60 and 70 of the segregated convicts were transferred to the old Kingston penitentiary, used now as a regional reception centre by the penitentiary service.

"There was a change in the atmosphere after the transfer," he testified. "The inmates themselves felt freer, safer in some cases."

NDP Attack Shifts to Ont.

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party MP Tuesday diverted his criticism from federal plans to curb medical care spending to the Ontario government's closure of hospitals as second-reading debate resumed in the Commons on a controversial amendment to the Medical Care Act.

John Gilbert, MP for Toronto-Broadview, attacked Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller for "marching across the province closing down hospitals without any negotiations."

He suggested Progressive Conservative MPs, who have joined with the NDP in criticism of federal government proposals to restrict Ottawa's a share of medical costs, send copies of their speeches to the leaders of the Conservative Ontario government.

Ontario's announced intention of shutting down 10 hospitals will deprive the sick of services and result in the loss of hundreds of jobs, he said.

The proposed federal amendments would mean that in the fiscal year 1976-77, Ottawa would increase its per capita contributions to medical care costs by a maximum 13 per cent. In the following year, the maximum increase would be 10.5 per cent.

In recent years, medical care costs have been rising by about 20 per cent a year. Until now, Ottawa and the provinces have shared costs on a 50-50 basis.

Heath Macquarrie (PC-Hillsborough) said the federal bill was a "belated binge of penny-pinching," a criminal injustice and an outrage to the sick of the country.

Macquarrie also criticized Health Minister Marc Lalonde for saying there is a satisfactory ratio of doctors to patients in the country when thousands of people live far from medical services.

Only One Firm Failing to Meet Take-Over Terms

OTTAWA (CP) — The Foreign Investment Review Agency says that so far it has only uncovered one company that doesn't seem to be living up to its promises made to the federal government as a condition of previously-approved foreign take-over.

The company, which the agency refuses to name, was spotted during a routine review of some 20 of the many approved foreign take-overs that have been handled by the foreign investment screening group since it started operation one and a half years ago.

A FIRA spokesman said Tuesday that the case in question is not yet in breach of the federal foreign investment review act, since the time allowed for fulfilling the legally-binding undertakings given FIRA has not yet elapsed.

But it is now obvious that the company will not be able to meet all of the undertakings within a reasonable period of time.

The agency intends to begin discussions to determine whether the company has a valid excuse for failing to meet its promises and whether an extension or modification should be allowed.

The excuse being offered by the particular company is that changing economic conditions, since the time the promises were originally made to FIRA, have made it impossible to meet all the undertakings in the time expected.

If some mutually-acceptable arrangement cannot be worked out between the government and such a company, the government has "as a last resort" the option under the foreign investment legislation to take the matter to court.

The court could then be asked to force the company to meet all or some of its undertakings within a specified period of time or, failing that, to force the company to divest itself of the Canadian company it had acquired.

The agency recently came under fire from the Committee for an Independent Canada, which claimed that "thus far, the FIRA has not shown any evidence of being more successful in following up commitments made by foreign owned companies." The criticism followed a CIC charge that Canada has shown a general inability to control non-Canadian firms, as has been proven by its "ongoing failure to equalize the crossborder price differential on cars produced under the Auto-Pact."

Is Clark Worth $2,000 an Ounce?

OTTAWA (CP) — In an inflation-fuelled spending spree said to be unmatched in Ottawa's history, the huge cast of characters in the Progressive Conservative leadership epic spent an estimated $4.7 million to put Joe Clark in command of the party.

At Clark's six feet and 145 pounds, that's roughly $783,000 a foot or $2,000 an ounce for a new leader of the official opposition.

Various officials made preliminary tallies of the total cost Tuesday as city work crews and hotel janitors cleaned up the last of the tattered and discarded placards, banners, silly hats and other convention debris.

They said the 7,000 delegates, alternates, observers, reporters, technicians and others who flooded the city for the four-day convention, which ended with Clark's narrow victory over Claude Wagner Sunday, spread at least $2.3 million around Ottawa's hotels, bars, restaurants and shops.

The 12 leadership candidates themselves were estimated to have sunk a total of $1.4 million into their campaigns, although final figures will not be known until the candidates submit detailed financial statements to party headquarters.

The total cost of renting and outfitting the Ottawa Civic Centre and downtown hotel meeting rooms to stage the convention is estimated at $500,000.

Another $500,000 is said to have been spent by the two national television networks to produce live national television programming of the event.

Some said the convention was less lavish than the 1968 Liberal extravaganza in the same arena here which elected Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, or the 1967 Conservative convention in Toronto which elected Robert Stanfield.

But inflation, running at more than 10 per cent annually in recent years, added to the cost of just about everything at the Clark convention, they said.

Clark estimated that his own campaign cost about $145,000, much more than the $35,000 or so spend by Pat Nowlan but less than the $175,00 or more estimated for the Brian Mulroney, Paul Hellyer and Wagner campaigns.

Convention organizers expect to recover most of the $500,000 cost of staging the event from registration fees. The 2,300 voting delegates paid $150 each to register at the convention. Observers paid $85 and students $35. The party charged casual onlookers $5 a day for the few vacant seats in the 9,000-seat arena.

CBC and CTV officials are being cagey about their total budgets. Each claimed to have displayed greater restraint than the other in mounting 18 hours each of live convention programming. The two networks used a total of 400 or so reporters, technicians, announcers, analysts and others and 24 cameras in their programming.

One broadcast official put the CTV cost at $225,000 or more and said the CBC cost was even larger because the publicly-owned network paid for the lighting and some other pooled convention facilities.

CBC DENIES IT BUGGED TORY COUNTING ROOM

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC denied Tuesday an allegation by a Progressive Conservative party official that it tried to bug the ballot-counting room at the party convention Sunday.

Party national director John Laschinger said Monday a microphone was discovered hidden in a seat in the counting room after the first ballot was cast in the convention.

The CBC replied that the suspected bug was in fact a transmitter used to feed the on-air broadcast back to CBC reporters working on the convention floor so they would know what was going out to viewers.

The CBC said the transmitter was located in the counting room because of its location in the exact centre of the Civic Centre.

It was mistaken for a microphone and disconnected by party officials.

"When the sound went dead for the floor reporters, technicians sought to find the reason and discovered the transmitter had been disconnected by Conservative party officials," the CBC said in a release.

"When it was explained that the mechanism was not a microphone but a transmitter, the Conservative party official reconnected the equipment."

Laschinger was not available for comment.

The matter was raised in the House by Erik Nielsen (PC — Yukon) who asked Solicitor-General Warren Allmand if the RCMP had investigated the allegations and if any charges were contemplated.

Allmand replied he would check with the force to see if there had been any complaints.

Gov't Called To Carpet On Spending

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government's $2 billion increase in spending adds to inflationary pressures across the country and the Anti Inflation Board should call the government on the carpet, oppositions members said Tuesday.

The board should take action and call Treasury Board President Jean Chretien to account for the huge increase in expenditures at this time of so-called restraint, said opposition financial critics in the commons.

Under legislation establishing the board it has the duty to comment upon the "implications of the failure of governments to co-operate in combatting inflation."

It is provided in the law that the anti-inflation measures be binding on all levels of government, they said.

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) and Sinclair Stevens (PC — York Simcoe) financial critics for the official opposition attacked the government's spending plans.

"How can the government embark on such massive over-spending at this time of expenditure restraint?" asked Sinclair. He said it is now fair for the house to assume that there will be deficit this year of $5 billion, not $3.2 billion as forecast earlier in the June budget.

Sinclair said most groups of working Canadians now must submit their past, current and future financial conditions to the scrutiny of the Anti-Inflation board.

He said the federal government should "come clean" and reveal its own revenue, expenditure and deficit projections.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said the house has budget dates. In addition the government had last week tabled its estimated expenditures for 1976-77.

Lambert pointed out that section 121 e of Bill C-73 establishing the Anti Inflation board imposes on the board the duty of commenting upon the "implications of the failure of governments to co-operate in combatting inflation."

"It also in the bill specifically provides for the law to be binding on all levels of government," he said.

Accordingly he said the treasury board president shoud refer to 1977 main estimates to the board for the board's "acid test."

"In view of the 16 per cent increase would the treasury board say he expects a reply from the board detailing what inflationary impact the proposed increase will have on government expenditure and whether there will be a revision of that expenditure," said Lambert.

Talks Slated On Oil Prices

OTTAWA (FP) — — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau assured the Commons Tuesday there will be discussions with all premiers on the appropriate price of oil, prior to the expiration of the present agreement July 1.

The government's white paper on inflation said the government intends to permit the price of oil and gas to rise "toward world levels," Edward Broadbent, national leader of the New Democratic Party pointed out.

There had been criticism from some premiers over the oil and gas price proposals because of the lack of consistency with other parts of the anti-inflation program. The government was trying in its program to hold down wages and prices while saying it would allow the price of oil and gas to go up.

Broadbent asked if the government had given serious reconsideration to including the well-head price of oil within the framework of the anti-inflation guidelines.

'Bit of patience and a lot of hard work—a hell of a lot of hard work'

Anyone Can Build a Log House ...Well, That's What They Say

max low

To some, it's the living out of a dream.

Others simply "get stuck with it."

But, all over North America right now, people are getting stuck into hard work building log dwellings. It's part of the swing back to the good old days of basic living in the pioneering style.

When Camosun college people announced their first log house building courses last fall they were amazed at the overwhelming response. The eight-week courses were booked out almost within hours and following courses met with the same popularity.

New courses start May 3. If you're serious about it and want to work six hours a day, five days a week for eight weeks, then the course will cost you $250. For weekenders who maybe plan a do-it-yourself cabin or house, you can take a course for either eight Saturdays or eight Sundays in a row at a cost of $100 per person or $150 a couple. At the moment, there are vacancies for the May courses but they probably won't last long.

The big attraction in log home building, apart from the beautiful rustic effect, is that anyone can do it. At least, that's what they'll tell you.

Take Victoria Times news editor Jonathan Franklin, for example.

"Anybody with a bit of patience and a lot of hard work — a hell of a lot of hard work — can build a log house," he says.

And he should know.

For Franklin, his wife Haleen and children Simon, 5, and Thia, 2, have just moved into a magnificent log house on their 12-acre property in the Highlands just north of Victoria. And they have a special pride in their new home because Franklin has toiled long hours in his spare time during the last two years to build it.

On weekends, he would work 14 hours a day and during the week he would return from his early-starting newsdesk job at 3 p.m. and work on the house until 8.

Now, except for the finishing touches and the cleaning up, it's all finished. And the end result is something on the grand scale of a hunting lodge or a skiing chalet, rather than a private home.

There is a gorgeous open lodge-style living area with a sunken central fireplace, large kitchen area complete with a huge pioneer-type wood stove, three bedrooms and bathroom and room to add a sauna and shower room. There is over 1,800 square feet of living area and the whole thing exudes space and restfullness.

Ken Chaytor, who conducts the Camosun log-building courses, considers Franklin's log work superb and says his building "is one of the better homes on southern Vancouver Island."

"It's so good, Jonathan could go into business," Chaytor adds. "I've taken two of my classes out there to see his work."

Apart from the framework in the upper part of the living room and the roofing, Franklin did it all. And yet, before this, he admits he had built nothing more ambitious than a plywood dog kennel.

But it wasn't easy. And he says he was "kind of stuck with it."

Originally, he had a young man experienced in log work who was going to build it for him. For a little while, Franklin worked alongside him to learn a bit about it. But then they fell out and the man left and, Franklin says, he was "trapped into finishing it."

Alone now, Franklin admits he was nervous but said he read Alan Mackie's book on log-home building and got on with the job.

And what a job it was! Preparing and positioning the huge logs Franklin had chosen to use posed the main problem. The two base logs were almost two feet wide and 70 feet long and weighed nearly two tons. Shorter ones, about 45 feet long, weighed about a ton and to move these around he spent over $2,000 on tools and a winch for his Landrover.

To lift the logs into place, he tried at first a series of pulleys using a wooden stand. But that broke straight away. And so he made a much stronger stand. That one broke, too. Finally, he had to have a metal "A" frame stand made and that one worked.

But the toughest work of all was the stripping of the bark from the huge logs.

"On first-growth trees, it took me three hours a log toiling away with a peeling spud to skin it," Franklin says. "And that's the hardest work I've ever done in my life. My hands were blue every day until I got used to it."

He came through it remarkably injury-free, only "cracking a couple of ribs" when he fell through the floor once and spraining an ankle when he jumped off one of the log walls.

FRANKLIN
. . . after the front page, back home to the grind

He and his wife were born in South Africa and he admits it seems "kind of funny for a couple of South Africans to come to Canada and build a log house." But Haleen is delighted.

"It's fabulous," she says. "It's a whole new experience. We feel now that we've done our thing.

"For, although we've been here nine years and have taken out Canadian citizenship, we feel we're really Canadians now . . . because we've built a log house."

Tourist Trade Slams Cutback On Marguerite

Spokesmen for Victoria's tourist industry today condemned as short-sighted a provincial government decision to cancel the Princess Marguerite's sailing to Port Angeles this summer.

They claimed it will hurt both the local and up-Island tourist trade, make a dent in the government's revenues from sales and accommodation tax and create a serious bottleneck in Port Angeles.

"I feel very strongly about this and would recommend the government think seriously about the repercussions of this decision," said Don Nixon, manager of the Visitors Information Centre on the Causeway.

Chamber of Commerce president Jack Hutchins said the chamber is opposed to any cutbacks in services bringing visitors to the Island.

In announcing the cancellation, Transport Minister Jack Davis said heavy overtime payments to crews make it impossible for the government to continue the double sailing schedule to Seattle and Port Angeles.

The previous schedule was also a strain for crew who manned the ship for up to 14 hours a day.

A department spokesman said the government will save money by cancelling the Port Angeles run each afternoon between return trips to Seattle.

But Nixon said it may turn out to be a false economy, because the money saved could be far outweighed by what the government loses in revenue from its five per cent sales tax and accommodation tax.

He pointed out that between June 2 and Sept. 7 last year the Marguerite carried 22,972 passengers and 5,006 cars from Port Angeles to Victoria.

Unlike the day trippers, he said, these were mainly visitors planning to spend at least a day and a half in the city and about three and a half days on the island. They stayed in hotels or motels and spent their dollars in the city.

Noticeable for the first time last year was a trend for such visitors to use Victoria as a "gateway" before making their way via the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen route to the mainland, so the repercussions of the cancellation could be far-reaching.

Nixon said with the Marguerite no longer calling at Port Angeles, visitors from that city would be forced to place greater pressure on the Black Ball run's Coho which is already operating at close to full capacity.

"It's going to create a real bottleneck in Port Angeles," he predicted.

Today's announcement by Davis said the schedule to Seattle has changed slightly, with the ship leaving Seattle a half-hour earlier at 8 a.m. and arriving in Victoria at 12:15.

It will leave Victoria an hour earlier at 4:30 p.m. and arrive in seattle at 8:45 p.m.

The new schedule will permit slower speeds in Puget Sound in keeping with reduced speed limits imposed by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Refit Cost Makes Big Difference

The mystery of the Princess Marguerite's finances was solved Tuesday and it appears to be a matter of accounting practices.

The former NDP government said the ship made about $100,000 profit on its first year of operations under the government and the Clarkson Gordon accountants report said the service lost $8,000.

The NDP released a financial statement from the ship's service Tuesday and it showed a profit of $105,350.

Robert McHaffie, spokesman for B.C. Steamships Corporation, said the NDP's accounting was an unaudited interim statement prepared with help from an accounting firm and thus was a "responsible report."

But Clarkson Gordon added to the expenditures for the year the cost of doing a refit of the ship this spring.

The money has not been spent yet, said McHaffie, but the new government decided to put the cost of the refit into the previous year — something he said is acceptable accounting practice.

Even though the refit is a start-up cost for 1976, he said, it can also be looked at as the cost of "wear and tear" from 1975.

Student Shot During 'Lark' In Saanich

A 17-year-old youth is in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital today following a shooting in Saanich Tuesday afternoon.

A Saanich police spokesman said Scott Harold Henderson, 6560 Ray in Central Saanich, was shot in the upper right shoulder as he and two friends were clowning in the basement of a home at 5004 Prospect Lake Road.

The spokesman said the shooting is being treated as accidental although an investigation into the incident has not yet been completed.

Henderson was admitted to hospital in serious condition. He was operated on overnight and early this morning his condition stabilized.

According to police the youth and two friends—Warren Arthur Aylworth, 5004 Prospect Lake Road, and David John Oldridge, 7022 Bickstan, Brentwood, both 17, had been taking photographs of each other in military pose and wearing army garb when the shooting occurred at about 2 p.m.

The three are classmates in Grade 12 at Claremont and had the afternoon off from classes.

Details of what happened are not clear but Frank Oldridge, father of David, told the Times this morning the three were apparently "larking about" in the basement of Aylworth's home.

Oldridge said Warren was dressed up in army kit and Scott was taking a picture of him while his son handled a gun.

"He was not aware it was loaded," Oldridge said. ". . . and then it went off."

Police said the gun was a semi-automatic 5.65 mm calibre Colt AR-15 rifle with a clip of shells attached. The bullet entered Henderson's shoulder and mushroomed behind.

Police seized the rifle and three others, all belonging to Aylworth, an army cadet, and all registered.

Oldridge said his son "knows nothing about guns."

"I wouldn't have a gun in my house," he said. "I've tried to instil in my kids they are very dangerous things and not toys.

"I'm particularly upset about what has happened especially after all the warnings and things they've been told about . . . it makes you despair."

Ironically, the shooting occurred on the day the federal government in Ottawa was introducing legislation designed to tighten the control of firearms in Canada.

Under the proposed legislation, careless handling and storage of firearms may make the gun owner liable to a criminal offence, carrying a penalty up to five years of imprisonment.

The law, if it is passed, however, cannot be applied retroactively.

Surcharge Set On Tape Decks

A new ICBC rule will cost B.C. drivers $10 extra to insure their car tape decks which have not been installed at the factory.

An ICBC spokesman said today the corporation took a look at its loss experience with car tape decks "and there were just too many being stolen."

Tape decks which are installed at the factory in the same way a radio is installed, estimated at only about one per cent of all car tape decks, will not cost extra.

But a tape deck installed by the owner will add $10 to the insurance premium.

The ICBC spokesman said tape decks must be permanently mounted on the car dash to be insured at all. If only the deck casing is bolted on, but the tape deck itself slides in and out, ICBC will not cover any losses if the deck is stolen.

Most insurance agents were aware of the new rule, the spokesman said and "hopefully they have been telling customers about it."

Anyone who did not buy the extra coverage when paying the regular premium, can pay the $10 anytime and get the special coverage.

With only four days left, counting today, until the Feb. 29 Autoplan deadline, only about 500,000 of the estimated 1.5 million vehicle owners in B.C. have bought their insurance.

ICBC general manager Norm Bortnick said many people are going to find themselves without insurance on March 1 and will have to face long line-ups at insurance offices.

'Dumping Ground' Protested

A dead, bloated sheep on the Clover Point beach has upset a Victoria area man who says the beach is turning into a dumping ground and a sewage hole.

"People don't seem to give a damn about the beach," says Geoff Faulkner, who lives on the Island Highway but takes his dog for daily walks at Clover Point.

Faulkner says he discovered the dead sheep Tuesday and that it must have been dumped there: "It's too far up to have come in with the tide."

He also came across six dead oil-covered seagulls.

Faulkner says he went to the Victoria police station in an attempt to get someone to remove the sheep from the beach, "but what they told me was 'don't worry about it'".

He finally got assurances that someone would clean it up, but on his walk today the sheep was still there.

"I came here 14 months ago from Edmonton and this is a beautiful city but people seem to say 'well, it's the same everywhere,' but I just can't see letting it go to that extent.

"I turned my head to catch the wind in my face the other day and all I could smell was sewage. The beach is turning into a dumping ground and a sewage hole."

Faulkner says about three months ago he discovered a pile of dead cats on the beach, "about 25 or 30 of them."

"I guess it was my fault that time because I didn't report it, but this seems to be happening all the more often."

Open Meetings Library Pledge

Future discussion of the new cost-sharing formula for Greater Victoria library services will be held in open meetings, the library board decided Monday.

The motion, initiated by Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, received full support of the board with the exception of Ald. David Paterson, of Saanich, and follows charges by one board member that the board was being kept in the dark about inter-municipal negotiations on the new formula.

Edward Ward-Harris, at last month's meeting, criticized chairman Gordon Hutcheson for refusing to tell the board what a meeting of mayors had decided about the new agreement.

The mayors have come up with a new cost-sharing proposal they hope will win the approval of the Library Development Commission, so increased grants, representing 20 per cent, instead of the current 5 per cent, will be available.

Ald. Dowell also initiated a motion which gave Hutcheson a unanimous vote of confidence after he was reappointed for a second term.

Hutcheson, an accountant, said the library system is still in a "very fragile position," but he is "pretty optimistic" that the four core municipalities will reach an agreement to keep the system operational.

The board heard Tuesday that Saanich has approved the cost-sharing scheme and Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have given informal approval.

The expected agreement means establishment of a new board of between seven and nine members municipally-appointed and the board's annual budget could only be reduced or rejected by a 60 per cent vote of participants.

Ask The Times

Q. Is it true that The Empress Hotel was offered for sale some years ago and had no buyer? How much did it cost to build The Empress and who are the owners now? M.M.

A. The Empress, built and still owned by CP Hotels Ltd., has never been offered for sale, a company spokesman says, although there have been several parties interested in buying it. In the early 60s demolition of the hotel and its replacement with a modern building was contemplated but there was a public outcry. Instead, Operation Teacup, a $7 million renovation, was undertaken from 1966 to 1970. The first stage of the hotel was opened Jan. 20, 1908, with the south wing opening three years later and eight more storeys and towers opening in 1929. The company declines to reveal construction costs.

Q. Where did the Doukhobor religious sect come from? M.H.

A. Doukhobors are of Russian origin, founded by a Prussian sergeant at Kharkov in the middle of the 18th century, and now mainly settled in Canada.

City May Rent Out Its Trucks

Victoria may consider going into the rent-a-truck business as one way of cutting costs in its public works department.

Ald. Bob Wright, pro tem chairman of the city's public works committee, told the council caucus meeting Tuesday that city engineer John Sansom will look at the possibility of obtaining other users — including neighboring municipalities — for some of the city's heavy equipment.

An expensive grader was used for only 65 hours last year and sat idle the rest of the time, he noted.

Wright said Sansom's detailed study of productivity and efficiency in his department will also include the feasibility of entering into some sort of joint purchasing arrangement with other municipalities, for bulk purchase of asphalt, gravel, pipe and other materials.

All utilities and services would be examined to ensure that users are bearing the full cost, and another cost-cutting measure would emphasize preventive maintenance of plant and equipment.

"A lot of our work now is done on a crisis basis," Wright explained.

As aldermen continued snipping away at expenditures in the proposed public works budget, Wright spelled out in slightly greater detail an earlier policy decision by council to cut staff wherever possible in the interests of operating economies.

After discussing the matter with Sansom, he said, he thought it should be possible on the public works side alone to achieve a 15 per cent reduction in staff through attrition, and he suggested council adopt that as a policy objective.

But Wright said to achieve that reduction will take time, and the biggest cut that could be realistically expected this year would be between five and 10 per cent.

The city engineer would have flexibility in pruning his present strength through retirements, not replacing staff who resign, "horizontal changes" and other moves, he explained.

Hockey: A Questionnaire For Fans and Non-Fans

Some random thoughts concerning the hockey situation in general and the Western Hockey League problem in partjcular, which is little different than it ever was, except that now it is closer to home.

But first let's quit all the indiscriminate screaming, especially by those who only criticize and never realize there is some good in all things.

Now for the questions:

Is it the regular hockey fan who is disturbed by the violence in hockey, or is it mostly the non-fan?

Has this been a violent year for the Cougars outside of the first game of the season and the Saskatoon brawl?

Have the Cougars been more violent than say the New Westminster Bruins?

Is the Western Hockey League really any different than the Ontario Hockey Association?

Are the Western players tougher than those in the East?

Are the Western kids really taught to play dirty hockey?

Are either of the above reasons enough that NHL teams usually draft Westerners highest?

As a hockey fan do you rush back from the men's room at the arena when you hear the cry "there's a fight", and rush from the fridge back to the living room when the same thing happens on TV?

When the heavy action is all over do you deplore the violence that is in the game today or do you call your buddy and say . . . "boy did you see so-and-so's left hand?"

What does your young son say first when he comes in late for the start of a TV game . . . is it, "what's the score? . . . or "have there been any fights?"

What would you do if you were a coach and the other team went over the boards after your players?

Would you sit back and allow your players to take a beating?

Would you just sit there and watch?

The coach gets all the flack, but oftentimes aren't the players equally as guilty?

Do you think referees should be required to attend clinics annually to upgrade their certification?

Do you think coaches, especially of amateur teams, should be required to do likewise?

Do you think the late Ivan Temple, who was secretary manager of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association, was wrong when he recommended three years ago that all minor hockey league coaches attend clinics? (The key word is ALL.)

Do you believe that if coaches took the time to attend lectures with the referees that they would better understand the role of the official and perhaps be better able to control their players?

Do you believe that many ugly incidents could be avoided if clinics for coaches were mandatory?

Do you believe that it's possible that even in minor hockey, bantams et al, that brawls are not uncommon?

Would you believe that in one report to the BCAHA a few years ago a peewee game had to be called in the second period because one player was pounding another with his stick an dthat fights broke out in the stands as well as on the ice?

Would you believe that the behaviour pattern in the minor leagues is getting worse, rather than better?

Would you believe that most youngsters who play hockey really believe that fighting is an integral part of the game?

Do you think that coaches are teaching the younger players the proper respect for authority?

Do you think that if the coaches don't show that proper respect themselves for authority, can the players really be blamed if they follow their coach's pattern?

Do you think a player should be charged if a coach orders him into the battle?

Do you think the European method of an official holding his arm between two combatants and ordering a cessation of hostilities would work in Canada?

Do you think a one-game suspension for any fight would be an efficient curb in junior hockey and below?

Do you think we should pack the whole thing up and take up tiddley-winks?

I haven't got the foggiest idea; and apparently neither does anybody else.

Anyway, answer the questions and see what you come up with. Who knows, you may even get into an argument. But no violence, mind.

A Message From Blight

Take that, is the message rookie right winger Rick Blight of the Vancouver Canucks delivers to the head of Chicago Black Hawks' defenceman Bob Murray in National Hockey League game at Vancouver Tuesday. Canucks Fail Test Against Chihawks

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks failed one of their biggest tests of the National Hockey League season at the Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver Tuesday night.

Blessed with the opportunity of moving to within two points of the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks of the Smythe Division of the NHL, the Canucks ended up six points behind thanks to a 4-1 lacing administered by the Hawks.

The Hawks struck for two unanswered goals in the second period to break open a tight-checking duel that had seen both teams limited to only four shots on goal in the first period.

The Hawks were shorthanded due to a penalty to Dennis Hull when John Marks picked up a goal against Ken Lockett in the Vancouver nets. Ivan Boldirev got the second midway through the period.

Darcy Rota put the Hawks ahead 3-0 early in the third period before rookie Glen Richardson was able to beat Tony Esposito in the Chicago nets.

For Philadelphia Flyers the re-appearance of goalkeeper Bernie Parent was probably received with mixed feelings. It was his first game of the year since undergoing surgery for a pinched nerve in his neck and he showed the lack of work.

Although only tested 19 times by the Washington Capitals, he allowed five goals in a 5-5 tie, and looked every ordinary indeed and not the all-star he has been in the past.

Parent was a backup for Wayne Stephenson last week, but coach Fred Shero decided to take the chance against usually woeful Washington.

The experiment backfired as the Flyers lost a point to Montreal Canadiens in their fight for the over-all NHL Lead.

The Canadiens increased their margin to eight points with a 6-2 win over St. Louis Blues. New York Islanders trounced Minnesota North Stars 7-2.

Despite a less-than satisfying first game, Parent, last year's most valuable player in the Stanley Cup playoffs, said it "felt good to be back."

"I know I'm not in condition now and not really ready to play," he said.

Parent told reporters he was in no pain during the game, saying "my biggest problem right now is loosing my balance after making quick moves."

Bob Sirois scored twice for the Capitals. Ron Lalonde, Hartland Monahan and Pete Scamurra were the other Washington scorers.

Dave Schultz, Orest Kindrachuk, Gary Dornhoefer, Rge Leach and Tom Bladon scored for the Flyers.

Guy Lafleur put the Canadiens ahead to stay when he broke a 1-1 tie in the second period with his 40th goal and brought his league-leading point total to 96 with a pair of assists.

Steve Shutt scored his 33rd and 34th goals and Pete Mahovlich scored his 30th goal for Canadiens.

Defenceman Denis Potvin got the Islanders started with two first-period goals and later assisted on goals by Ed Westfall, Billy Harris and Bryan Trottier.

Potvin said he was very impressed with the play of Steve Jensen, a U.S. Olympic standout who made his debut with the Stars and drew an assist on a goal by Norm Gratton.

Cougar Job To Lennartz

Cliff Lennartz, a former coach in the Manitoba Junior Hockey League, has been chosen to succeed Pat Ginnell as coach of the Western Canada Hockey League's Victoria Cougars.

Ginnell, also owner and general manager of the Cougars, said Tuesday he wants Lennartz to take over. Lennartz, a long-time associate of Ginnell's, indicated he would accept.

Ginnell stepped down as coach on Monday as an aftermath of last Friday's violence-filled game in Saskatoon.

Jim Bryson, a former trainer with Ginnell's teams in Flin Flon, handled the Cougars in Edmonton on Monday, when they lost 9-3 to the Oil Kings, and again Tuesday night when Victoria rebounded to defeat Calgary Centennials 5-3 in Calgary.

Lennartz, a Dauphin, Man., businessman who coached his hometown entry in the Manitoba League several years ago, has helped Ginnell at training camp in Victoria for the past two years.

Lennartz arrived in Calgary late Tuesday, in time to watch the Cougars play but not in time to fully discuss the job offer.

Both Lennartz and Ginnell indicated they would "shake hands" on the matter today.

Lennartz and Ginnell both played together with Flin Flon's Memorial Cup-winning team in 1957.

Ginnell again repeated that "no pressure" was applied to have him step down as coach.

"I understand the players were upset by my decision," he said, "but we had a meeting Tuesday and they know I'm going to be around to help out. I don't think Cliff is going to need much help because he's been around, and he knows what it takes to produce winning hockey."

The Cougars received a strong performance from goalie Murray Bannerman, winger Jeff McKill and the defence to defeat the Centennials before a Calgary turnout of 1,840 fans. Bannerman faced 35 shots while rival Jerry Price faced only 23. Despite Calgary's edge in shooting, Cougar defencemen proved alert to back up Bannerman's display.

McDill, who was fingered by Ginnell as a potential 50-goal scorer before the start of the season, came within five of his target by scoring three times. McDill completed his three-goal effort with an open-net goal in the final minute.

Defenceman Don Johnson and Mike Will, one of Victoria's most hottest producers in recent weeks, added the other Cougar goals.

The Cougars started without Greg Tebbutt and Archie Henderson—both under suspension — and the team lost winger Curt Fraser early in the second period when he was handed a game misconduct for fighting with Calgary's Ted Olson in the penalty box.

Apart from that flareup, and a subsequent third-period fight between Dale Ewasiuk and Calgary's Reg Sommer, it was a cleanly-played affair.

The Cougars, who are to play every night this week, return to Edmonton tonight.

In other games Tuesday, New Westminster downed the Blades 5-2 in Saskatoon before a capatity turnout of 4,313 fans, and Kevin McCarthy established a scoring record for defencemen to lead Winnipeg Clubs to a 7-6 decision over Kamloops.

The game in Saskatoon, the first since Friday's wild one, was cleanly played. New Westminster took five of only eight minors called.

Both coaches — Jack McLeod of Saskatoon and New Westminster's Ernie McLean—signed an agreement before the game that they would do everything in their power to maintain law and order.

At Winnipeg, McCarthy drew two assists to run his "helping" total to 72, one more than the previous record set two years ago by Greg Jolyof the Regina Pats.

Saints Set To Give Up Fighting

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The final chapter in the roller-coaster story of Minnesota Fighting Saints may be written today.

The president of the World Hockey Association team said it would fold today if the players were not paid by noon ESTT.

"If we don't have the money to pay them, we'll fold the franchise," said club president Wayne Belisle. "Fold it —and that will be that."

Belisle met with the Saints players Tuesday at a practice to inform them that a possible emergency infusion of money by a group of Boston investors had failed to jell.

"We can't raise the money we need here," he added. "If the town doesn't want a hockey team, okay."

The Saints players did not receive their Feb. 15 paycheck and are still without pay for the last two weeks of December. The team was scheduled to meet San Diego Mariners tonight, but the players are not expected to continue playing any longer without pay.

If the Saints collapse, they would join Denver Spurs in limbo. The Spurs folded last month after playing two games in Ottawa.

The Saints are one of only six teams still operating in the same city as when the league began operations in the 1972-73 season. The other survivors are Houston Aeros, Edmonton Oilers, Cleveland Crusaders, Winnipeg Jets and Quebec Nordiques.

Since the financial troubles were disclosed in November, two high-salaried players have gone to National Hockey League teams, reducing the twice-a-month payroll by $20,000.

Rick Smith and Henry Boucha left this month when it became apparent the Saints were plunging further into debt.

"Most of our staff has been looking for jobs," said one front office employee Tuesday night. "Some harder than others, but I know we'll all be out tomorrow."

Second-Tier Skiers Disappoint Winner

BROMONT, Que. (CP) — Jim Hunter of Calgary won the men's giant slalom at the Canadian alpine ski championships Tuesday but was surprised that second-level Canadian competitors did not produce a better effort to beat Canada's international skiers.

Hunter, 22, a national team member who won the slalom Monday, had times one minute, 1.83 seconds and 1:01.60 for a combined 2:03.43 to defeat David Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., and Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., second and third in a field of 50.

Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., Canada's lone gold medal winner in the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, took the women's giant slalom in 1:10.61.

But Hunter said the second tier of Canadian men "should have been waiting to knock us off."

"You can't stay at an emotional peak all the time. Coming back from the Olympics, we were naturally going to be down and I thought they would be dying to get a crack at us."

Miss Kreiner, who failed to complete her first run in Monday's slalom and thus was disqualified for the second, beat Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que.

Clifford: winner of Monday's slalom, finished second in Tuesday's event in 1:11.45. Vanita Haining of Calgary was third in 1:12.69, followed by Chris McCready of Vancouver in 1:12.72.

Nordiques Hold Edge on Aeros

By The Canadian Press

Quebec Nordiques knocked off Western Division leading Houston Aeros in the World Hockey Association Tuesday night and coach Jean-Guy Gendron gave much of the credit to his defence.

"Our defence is playing fantastic hockey for us," Gendron said after the Nordiques beat the Aeros 4-1 for their third win in four games against the league leaders this season.

The victory, on home ice, moved the Nordiques to within four points of the front-running Winnipeg Jets in the Canadian Division. The two teams meet in Quebec City Saturday night.

In other games, Calgary Cowboys scored a late goal to manage a 3-3 tie with Edmonton Oilers in Edmonton and Cincinnati Stingers downed Toronto Toros 9-6 before the lowest attendance ever for a Toros game in Maple Leaf Gardens—5,004.

Marc Tardif, the WHA's leading scorer, scored his 55th and 56th goals of the season for the Nordiques.

Tardif ran his point total to 112 by assisting on Real Cloutier's goal in the third period which opened up a 3-1 lead. Serge Bernier completed the Nordique scoring with Andre Hinse replying for the Aeros.

Edmonton goalie Dave Dryden faced 45 shots and was a standout for the Oilers, but his only mistake of the night allowed the Cowboys to earn

Violence! Fan Slugs Ref in Juvenile Game

Times News Services

Provincial police in Cayuga, Ont., say they are investigating an incident Tuesday night in which a fan jumped onto the ice and slugged a referee, cutting him for six stitches, at an Ontario Minor Hockey Association juvenile playoff game between Cayuga and Six Nations.

The game was called off after the incident which occurred near the end of the second period.

Referee Gord Anderson, 32, of Simcoe had just called two major misconducts against the Cayuga team when a fan jumped over the boards and struck him.

The other referee, Chuck Brimmer, also of Simcoe, said today he rushed to Anderson's aid which apparently prompted another fan to go onto the ice. The Cayuga detachment of the provincial police was called to the scene.

Other fans eventally talked the two spectators off the ice.

"I didn't exactly see what happened as I was controlling the players," said Brimmer. "I turned around just in time to see him (Anderson) get hit."

Anderson was struck near the eye.

Cayuga is about 20 miles south of Hamilton.

In Quebec City, Steve Sutherland of Quebec Nordiques was assessed a six-game suspension by the World Hockey Association as the result of stick-swinging incident in a game here Sunday between the Nordiques and New England Whalers. Sutherland was given a match penalty by referee Bob Kolaro after swinging his stick and striking Doug Roberts of the Whalers during a second-period altercation.

In addition to the suspension, Sutherland must pay $1,000 to a Quebec City crippled children organization.

STILL MILES APART

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Negotiators for major league baseball's owners and players meet for another round of talks in a bid to resolve the impasse that prompted the owners to delay spring training.

Marvin Miller, representative of the Major League Players Association, and some members of the owners' bargaining committee, attempted to narrow the apparent huge gap separating the two interests.

Miller also had a meeting scheduled with members of Philadelphia Phillies in his tour of the 24 major league cities. This is his fifth stop after bringing the issues to players in Los Angeles, Chicago, Cincinnati and Houston.

The owners have made public their offer to the players to settle the issue, one of the planks being an owners' version of a compromise on the controversial reserve clause.

The owners have proposed a plan under which would allow a player with eight full years major league experience to become a free agent in his 10th season after playing out an option year.

John Gaherin, the owners' chief negotiator, had described this as a "fair and equitable proposal."

Miller has rejected the reserve clause offer and countered with a "one-and-one" proposal as upheld by an arbitrator and one court.

The issue now is before a federal tribunal in St. Louis and appears destined to reach the United States Supreme Court.

Giants Stay in 'Frisco; Toronto Out of Picture

CHICAGO (AP) — Sale of San Francisco Giants to Robert Lurie and Bob Short was approved Tuesday by National League owners pending certain conditions involving the buyers and the City of San Francisco.

Chub Feeney, president of the National League, said he has no doubts the conditions will be met by the March 1 deadline.

The sale to the Lurie-Short combine, which also includes M.E.I., a Minneapolis conglomerate, assures the Giants of remaining in San Francisco.

Lurie, a San Francisco businessman, said the pruchase price of $8 million had been met with $500,000 in escrow. The remaining $7.5 million in cash was ready, he said.

Feeney would not reveal what the final conditions of the sale were, but said they were not financial and the purchase would be automatic when they are met.

Feeney said the meeting of the National League owners incolved only the San Francisco matter.

"Expansion was not discussed but we plan future meetings to discuss expansion because our people are very interested in the question," said Feeney.

Approval of the sale left Toronto out of the National League picture for the time being, but representatives from Toronto appeared at Tuesday's meeting.

"We are interested in what happens today," said Don McDougall, president of Labatt's Brewery of Canada Ltd., one of three firms involved in the bid to bring the Giants to Toronto.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and a holding company owned by R. Howard Webster, chairman of FP Publications Ltd., joined Labatt's in making a $13.25-million offer for the Giants.

The Giants directors accepted the offer, which included $5.25 million to cover the cost of litigation resulting from the franchise shift, but a San Francisco court order blocked the move until Short and Lurie put together their offer.

"We are interested only in the Giants for the time being and not in expansion. If there is expansion we will have to reconsider because that is a new ball game," said McDougall.

Mayor George Moscone of San Francisco told reporters he would try to take some economic burden off the sew owners including the possibility of removal or reduction of a 50-cents-a-ticket amusement tax.

B.C. Highways Dept. Could Exercise More Care

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It appears the provincial highways department has been handed too loose a rein while constructing the link-up between Kelsey Bay and Port Hardy on the north end of Vancouver Island . . . A trip to Kelsey Bay last week provided an apportunity to view a portion of the southern section of the highway, which will eventually cut through the Tsitika-Schoen area . . . I wasn't too impressed with the route or some of the culvert installations . . . Part of the new highway, which follows the Adam River a little too closely, was built right along the edge of a lake when it could have just as easily been constructed along a bench above a MacMillan Bloedel main haul road . . . There also seems to be an unnecessary number of crossings over the Adam . . . One of the culverts in the section near the lake was hopelessly inadequate and the entire width of gravel roadbed had been washed away . . . Most of the silt obviously ended up in the lake . . . There might also be some far-reaching secondary ramifications . . . Major logging companies in the area are keeping careful note of all environmental infractions committed by the highways department . . . These same companies have had their knuckles rapped in the past few years for many of the same practices the highways department is carrying out and the accumulated information will doubtless provide them with a strong bargaining point . . . It doesn't pay to have two sets of rules.

Along the same theme . . . One mine in Strathcona Park is one too many . . . You only have to visit the Western Mines site at the southern end of Buttle Lake to realize the impact of mining within a wilderness area reaches far beyond the actual acreage taken up with the mine itself . . . That end of Buttle will be mangled for generations because of logging operations and subsequent "fringe damage" from slash burning . . . Silt from mine tailings is discoloring the water of the lake and has probably helped contribute to the downfall of trout fishing in the vicinity during recent years . . . Is the Big Interior Mountain area of the park, which includes Della Falls, about to undergo the same fate? . . . It looms as a distinct possibility if the current Socred administration is blind enough to follow in the footsteps of the last.

Not all court cases go against the fish and wildlife branch . . . For killing an elk during the closed season in the Interior, a family court judge handed the following sentence to a juvenile . . . He was put on probation for four months, required to pass the Conservation and Outdoor Recreation Education program, had his right to obtain a hunting licence cancelled for two years and, most importantly, ordered to do 50 hours of work with a community elk feeding program on designated dates.

Something that might be considered in B.C. . . . Solar energy is getting a boost in nine states south of the border . . . Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Montana, New Hampshire, North Dakota, South Dakota and Oregon have all passed legislation in the past two years to provide tax concessions for owners of homes and other buildings who install solar energy systems for heating or cooling.

Trail Wildlife Association members have come up with some interesting figures regarding this province's expenditures on fish and wildlife . . . B.C. spends approximately four cents per acre compared to a high of 57 cents per acre in the relatively-enlightened state of Oregon . . . Expenditures per acre for other states are Montana (six cents), Idaho (13), Colorado (23) and Washington (27) . . . Perhaps a little extra money right now, spent in a constructive way, will prevent payment of vast sums in the future for restoration purposes.

Just a reminder to all those who received a game harvest questionnaire from the fish and wildlife branch . . . Response has been disappointing so far this year compared to a return rate of 23.5 per cent last year . . . The task of managing our wildlife resources is helped considerably through data provided on these questionnaires . . . So don't put it off any longer . . . Complete those forms and get them in the mail.

McNabb Resigns Post; Disputes Fine, Bond

NANAIMO — Coach Larry McNabb of the Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey league says there is no way he can stay as coach and that he will quit the club after tonight's game here against Chilliwack Bruins.

McNabb made the announcement Tuesday after he had been ordered by league president Bryan Couling to post a $1,000 good-behavior bond levied because of a swearing incident involving an official Thursday night.

McNabb also forfeited a previous $200 bond and was assessed a $200 fine.

Couling said "there is no way a referee or linesman in our league has to take the amount of verbal abuse that McNabb has directed at them over the season. If we let this sort of thing go on unchecked, we'd soon find it impossible to obtain officials to work our games."

McNabb had been fined three previous times for his attacks on referees.

McNabb said he was completely shocked by the fine and the loss of his bond and he had no alternatives but to resign his position as coach.

"There's just no way I can afford to post a $1,000 bond and there's no way they can make me pay the fine," he said, adding that he had no recollection of the swearing incident. He said there is not a coach in the league that hasn't sworn at a referee following a game.

Couling also said he had fined Kelowna Buckaroos $200 for unnecessary remarks made to Couling and an off-duty linesman following a game in Maple Ridge Sunday.

Kelowna Captain Brad Owens has been suspended for one game for leaving the penalty box during the same game in Maple Ridge.

The Clippers are owned by Pat Ginnell of Victoria, who is also owner of the Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey league. Ginnell resigned as Cougar coach Monday in the aftermath of a brawl involving the Cougars and Saskatoon Blades Friday night. There was no comment from Ginnell on the McNabb case.

McNabb took over as Clipper coach this year. The Clippers currently are four points behind the league-leading Vernon Essos.

Another Night To Laud Bates

Thursday will be another night to pay tribute to Victoria Bates, the co-holders of the world men's softball title.

The team will be honored during a dance at the Ingraham Hotel, starting at 9 p.m.

The affair is open to the general adult public.

Lions Achieve Success In Sale of Debentures

VANCOUVER (CP) — The financially-troubled British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have received pledges for $200,000 worth of debentures, club treasurer Jack Farley said Tuesday.

Lions are offering $300,000 in debentures to help cover a loss of $304,696 in 1975.

The Western Football Conference club announced its master financing plan Feb. 9, and said it sold $102,000 in debentures within three days and a minimum goal of $200,000 was set.

The sale was limited to Lions' football club members although other persons can buy associate memberships to qualify for the debentures.

Farley said: "The membership seems united in wanting to keep control of the club" and with the deadline passed (seven days before the annual meeting Thursday), there is no application for purchase of the team valued at about $1.8 million.

THE LEISHMAN SUIT. STILL THE BEST CLOTHING VALUE IN THE COUNTRY.

It's almost a shame to have to describe a Leishman pure wool suit as being outstanding simply because of its value.

For, as you can plainly see, this handsome suit could be sold on its looks alone.

The colours it comes in are brand new this spring. Lighter than before. Rather dusty in shade. Accented by a very elegant, subdued pin-stripe.

As ever, the cloth is pure virgin wool. Luxurious to the eye. Soft to the body.

Our Leishman suit has all the appearance of being very expensive.

But because we make our suits in our own factory and avoid buying from 'outside', our people can take a little more time on the details, a little more care in the tailoring. And still bring you all this fashion for much less than you'd pay elsewhere.

$199.95 is the regular Tip Top Leishman price. But, for the next 4 days $169.98 is all we ask.

And for everything you're getting, that's not asking a lot.

FOR 4 DAYS ONLY $169.98

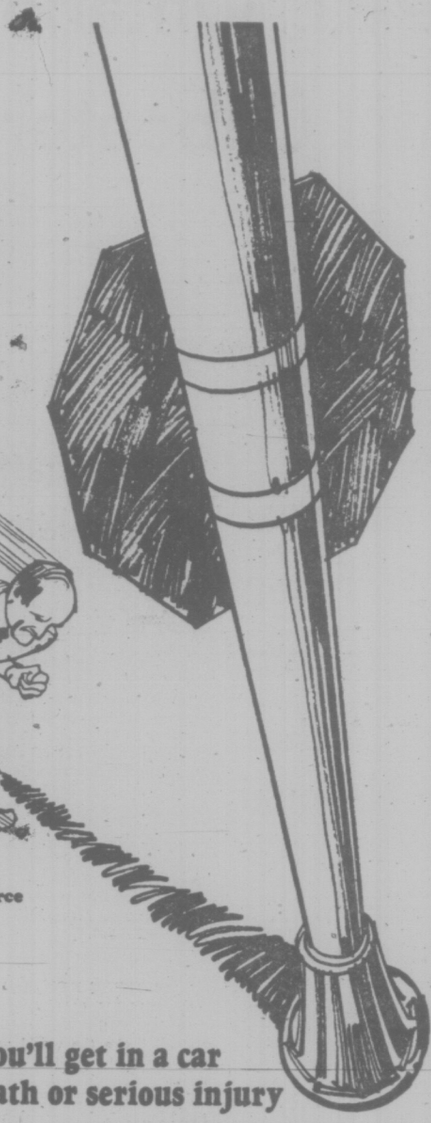
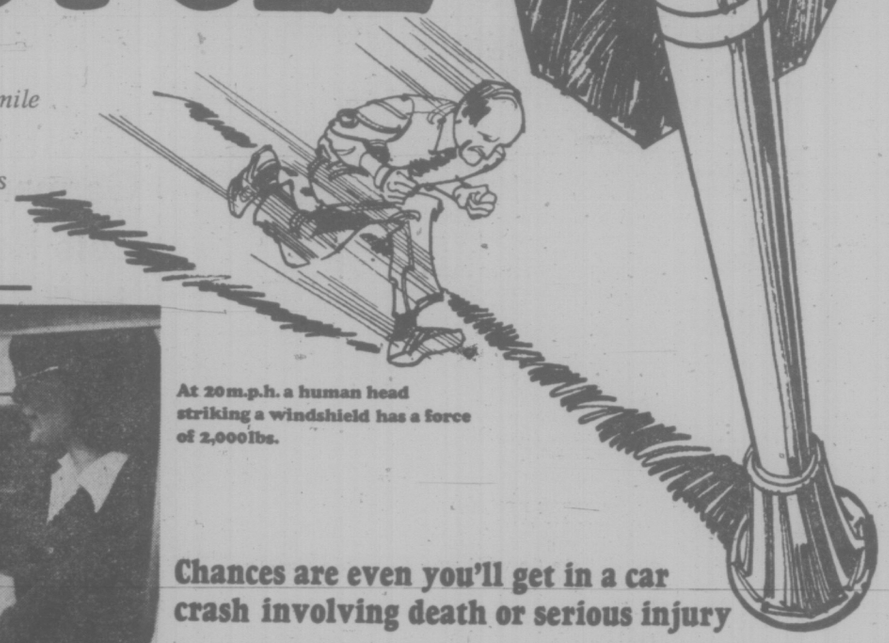
RUN AS FAST AS YOU CAN INTO THIS POLE



It is not easy to appreciate just how severe the human collision can be even in low-speed crashes. To help understand what happens, imagine someone walking briskly head-first into a steel post such as a car windshield pillar. This would be about a 3 or 4 mile per hour collision. A person would probably survive without serious injury.

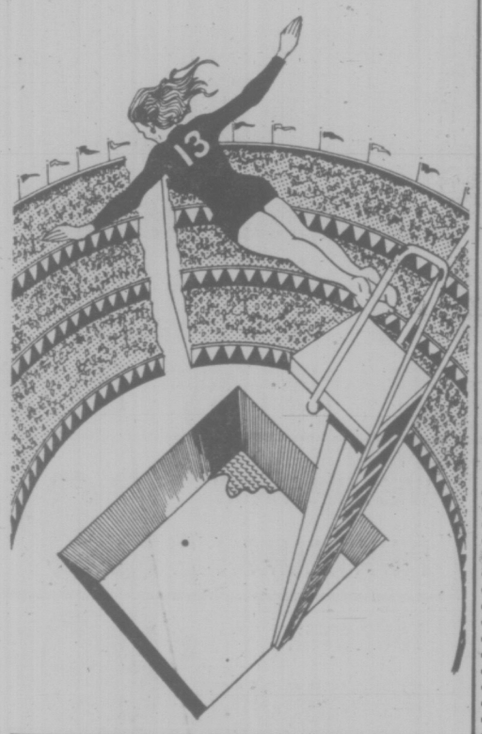
Then imagine him running full speed into the steel post. If he ran fast, this would be about a 15 mile per hour collision. His injuries would be severe - he might not survive.
Now imagine his head striking the post at 30 miles per hour. The force would be four times greater than at 15 miles per hour and the person would not survive.



At 20m.p.h. a human head striking a windshield has a force of 2,000lbs.

It's not the fall that kills you, it's the stop at the end

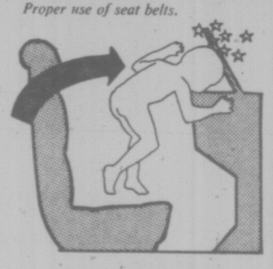
And it's not the car's collision that hurts in a crash. It's your collision inside the car. When a car hits something it buckles and bends and then comes to a stop. The second, more important collision is what happens to you. If you're not restrained by seat belts in the car you bounce around until your body or head hits something like the steering wheel or dash. And hitting something that hard with a force of several thousand pounds causes serious injuries and possibly death. Lap and seat belts keep you in your seat and prevent the second collision. The one that hurts.



The human collision and how to avoid it

In a 30 m.p.h. barrier crash the car is crushed a couple of feet and then comes to a stop. Occupants of the car keep moving at thirty miles per hour towards the point of impact where they slam into the steering wheel, windshield or some other part of the car. This is the Human Collision. The human collision can often involve two or more people. Drivers and front passengers can be injured by rear seat passengers being thrown forward. And when people carry small children on their laps, the adult can crush the child under the severe forces of a crash. To avoid the human collision the occupants of a car must come to a gradual stop without being thrown forward. And this can be done by holding the occupant in his seat by the use of belts. The difference between the belted occupants' stopping distance and the unbelted occupants' stopping distance is often the difference between life and death.

Proper use of seat belts.



Children are a high risk for head injuries

Because a small child has a relatively heavy head and fragile skull, it is more likely to suffer serious head injuries. Even in low speed accidents. Seventeen percent of car occupants killed or injured in Ontario in 1973 were children under the age of fourteen. When travelling with children remember they are specially vulnerable. So make sure that they have their seat belts buckled. At all times on every trip.

Chances are even you'll get in a car crash involving death or serious injury

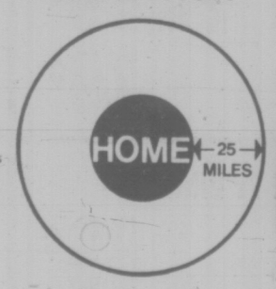
Every person who uses the roads risks injuries or death. And there's no getting away from it. Look at the facts . . . of all the people now living in Ontario 12.5%, that's 962,886 real living persons will be killed or injured in a car accident over the next ten years. Over the next forty years 33.5%, 2,580,535 people, will be killed or injured. And if you are now under 35 your chances of being killed or injured in the next forty years are 44%. No one can predict when these accidents will happen and no one can look into the future and tell who these people will be. You can drive more carefully; you can avoid drinking and driving; you could even drive less. But none of these steps will guarantee your immunity. There is one sure way to cut your risk in half and that's by wearing seat belts. They won't stop accidents but they will reduce your chances of death by 50%, serious injuries by 70% and minor injuries by 40%. No one is immune to accidents.

If everyone always wore seat belts deaths due to car crashes would decrease by 50%. Serious injuries by 70% and minor injuries by 40%.

No one is immune to accidents.

Look what Mrs. Mathews picked up shopping today

A minor accident that led to some not so minor injuries. Because Mrs. Mathews, like many other people, only wears seat belts on a long trip. But facts show that the accident rate is low on expressways and that short trips are potentially more dangerous. Even though the speeds are lower. Also most people drive locally a great deal more than they drive long distances. Therefore, the chances of being involved in an accident close to home are greater.



The danger zone.

How seat belts work.

Restrained Unrestrained

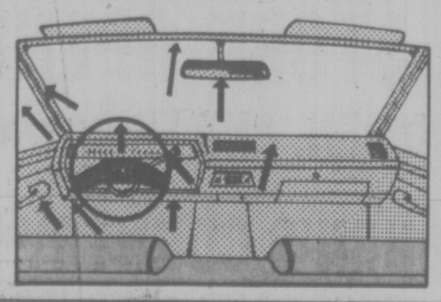
Dash Dangers

Many parts of the car interior can cause head and chest injuries. And even though the dash may be padded, underneath is something pretty solid. And being thrown against any part of the car interior is potentially dangerous. Rear view mirrors can become lethal glass splinters, glove compartment lid falling open presents a sharp cutting edge. The only way to avoid hitting these dash dangers in an accident is to wear lap and shoulder belts to restrain you and make you part of the car.



Many parts of the car interior can cause head and chest injuries.

At 15–20 m.p.h. on a short trip that was made at least once a day for for the past 18 years this happened...

Pre-crash

Vehicle one, a 1969 Buick, was entering an uncontrolled residential intersection at between 15-20 m.p.h. The driver was taking his mother-in-law to his home, a short trip that he made at least once a day for the past 18 years. Vehicle two, a 1971 Plymouth, also entered the intersection at a speed of 30 m.p.h. and collided with vehicle one.

Crash

The entire front end of vehicle two struck vehicle one on the left quarter panel and drivers door. Vehicle one struck a tree and rebounded to collide once again with vehicle two. Neither driver recalled taking any evasive action.
On impact the driver of vehicle one was thrown against the driver's door his knees struck the lower A-pillar and brake lever. On impact with the tree he was thrown forward against steering wheel and his head struck the windshield. Passenger in vehicle one was thrown against the driver and steering column. On impact with the tree she was thrown forward into instrument panel and her head struck the windshield.
Driver in vehicle two was thrown forward and both knees contacted the lower instrument panel his head contacted the windshield which shattered.

Injuries/causation

Driver vehicle one
1. Cerebral concussion, hematoma, and laceration to forehead/ upper roof rail, rearview mirror, windshield header.
2. Fracture of left 3rd, 4th and 5th ribs/interior left door panel.
3. Pain left knee/parking brake, lower A-pillar.

Passenger Vehicle one.
1. Cerebral injury/instrument panel, steering assembly.
2. Fractured left cravicle/steering assembly and driver.

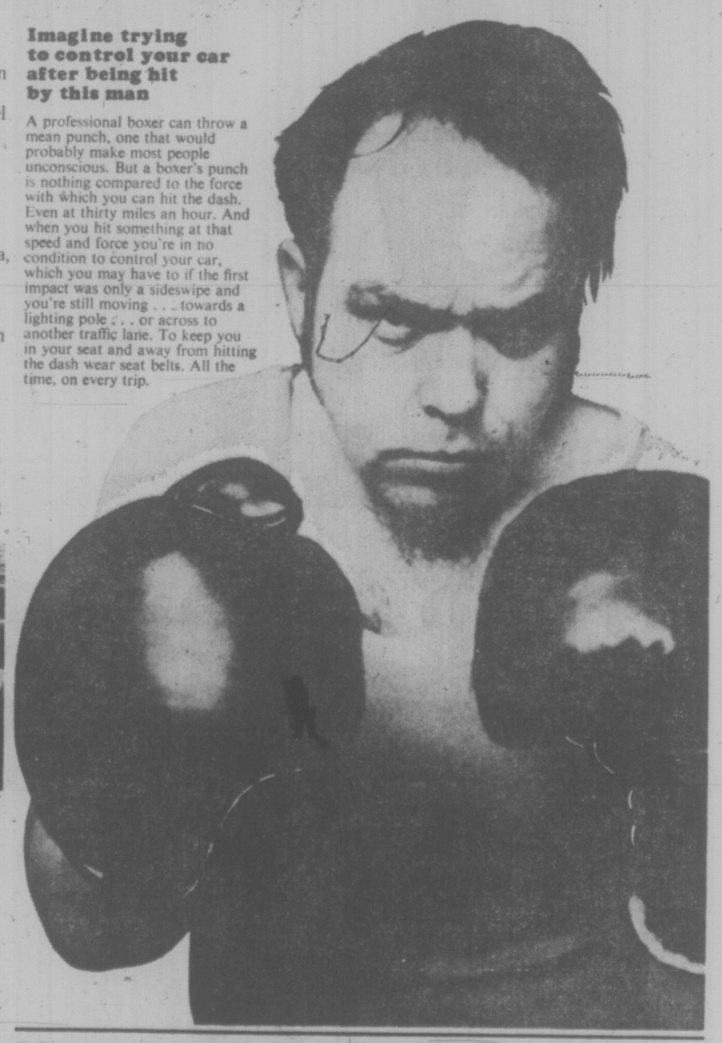
Driver Vehicle two.
1. Superficial lacerations to head/ windshield.

Conclusions.

All injuries to all three victims were caused through contact with vehicle interiors and other occupants, through unrestrained movement in vehicles throughout the crash phase.
Injuries would have been avoided or kept to a minor nature through use of seat belts which were installed in both vehicles

Imagine trying to control your car after being hit by this man

A professional boxer can throw a mean punch, one that would probably make most people unconscious. But a boxer's punch is nothing compared to the force with which you can hit the dash. Even at thirty miles an hour. And when you hit something at that speed and force you're in no condition to control your car, which you may have to if the first impact was only a sideswipe and you're still moving . . . towards a lighting pole . . . or across to another traffic lane. To keep you in your seat and away from hitting the dash wear seat belts. All the time, on every trip.



If you're not wearing a seat belt what's holding you back?

72 HORSES KILLED IN PRE-DAWN FIRE

ALORTON, Ill. (AP) — A pre-dawn fire swept through a horse barn at Cahokia Downs Race Track Tuesday, claiming the lives of 72 horses whose worth was estimated at almost $500,000.

The horses perished when flames of undetermined origin swept through the wooden barn and adjoining tack rooms. A groom attempting to save his horses was the only person reported injured.

Races scheduled for Tuesday night were cancelled, but track officials expected to resume the current Mississippi Valley Trotting Association season Wednesday night.

An estimated 45 horses were led from the blazing Barn F, one of nine at the track.

Liverpool Falls Before Arsenal

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool lost the chance to widen its two-point lead in the English soccer championship Tuesday when it fell to a last-minute goal at Arsenal.

John Radford, only recently restored to the Arsenal attack, swept in to head in a pass from Ireland's Liam Brady. The goal ended Liverpool's unbeaten run of 12 matches.

At the lower end of the First Division standings, Burnley pulled away from relegation by beating Sheffield United 3-1. Fellow-strugglers Wolverhampton gained a point with a 1-1 draw at Aston Villa.

Southampton intensified its challenge for the Second Division lead by beating Fulham 2-1. A fierce drive by England's Mike Channon settled the issue with half an hour left.

German Girl Sets Record In the 400

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Rita Wilden of West Germany broke her own world record in the 400 metres as her team-mates and the surprising Bulgarians challenged Soviet Union supremacy Sunday at the European indoor track and field championships.

Miss Wilder, a 28-year-old Olympic silver and bronze medallist, led all the way in winning her specialty in 52.2 seconds, 1-100th of a second faster than the mark she set earlier this year in the West German championships.

Her victory was the outstanding individual performance of the two-day meet on the artificial track at the Olympic Sports Hall.

Canadian Juniors Share Lead

AVIEMORE, Scotland (CP) — Paul Gowsell of Calgary, with help from Claude Feige of France, bounced back with tow victories Tuesday for a share of first place in the world curling championship after five rounds.

The Canadian rink defeated defending chammpion Jan Ulsten of Sweden 6-3 in fourth-round play Tuesday before beating Hans-Pieter Kiesel 6-3 of West Germany in the next round. Gowsell, 18, and his rink of third Neil Houston, second Glen Jackson and lead Kelly Stearne, lost 8-4 to Scotland in third-round play Monday after two consecutive wins.

Gowsell, winner of last year's Canadian schoolboy championship, shares first place with Sjur Leon of Norway and Feige, all with 4-1 records.

At 3-2 are Donald Barcombe of the United States and Bob Kelly of Scotland. Sweden, West German and Switzerland all have 2-3 marks with Denmark at 1-4 and Italy at 0-5.

Norway entered the fourth round with the only udefeated record but slipped to a four-way tie for first when Leon lost 4-2 to Jean-Claude Stettler of Switzerland.

The six-day competition for curlers under 21 years of age ends Friday with semi-finals and final play.

$100,000 Assault Suit Filed

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A Muskegon player has filed a $100,000 suit against Ken Wright of Toledo Goal Diggers, the club, its coach and the International Hockey League, claiming he was assaulted during a Dec. 21 game is Toledo.

Defenceman Lynn Margarit claimed in his United States District Court suit he was attacked and struck in the back of the head while his back was turned to Wright.

Margarit, a native of Thunder Bay, Ont., said he was knocked cold and Wright kept up the attack while he was down.

The 30-year-old player for Muskegon Mohawks said in his suit that Toledo coach Ted Garvin told Wright "by either words or gestures to strike and beat plaintiff."

The Toledo team and the league were cited for failing to prevent such behavior. League officials could not be reached for comment.

Marshall Arrested for Practising

EAST LANSING (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Mike Marshall was arrested Tuesday for hitting a baseball without a permit in the Michigan State University Intramural Building.

Campus police officials said they were summoned to the building after tennis-playing students and faculty members complained Marshall's use of a nearby hitting and pitching area disrupted their games.

The hitting-pitching net is situated so baseball and tennis can not be played simultaneously without disruption, Michigan State officials said.

"The subject disrupted normal activities, to wit tennis, by hitting a baseball," said Maj. Adam Zataut, campus uniformed police commander.

All persons who want to use the facilities must reserve space first, said Frank Beeman, intramural director. Until last Monday, special time slots automatically were reserved for Marshall to practice two days a week but the area has been in growing demand so the special privilege was withdrawn, Beeman said.

Campus police said Marshall refused to leave unless he was arrested. Police said they drove Marshall to headquarters and booked, fingerprinted and photographed him before releasing him without bond.

A warrant will be sought charging him with disrupting the normal use of a campus area which was assigned through appropriate channels for other educational or extracurricular activities, said Zataut. The misdemeanor carries a maximum $100 fine and 90 days in jail upon conviction. Marshall, who is working toward a PhD. in Physiology at Michigan State, claimed in a telephone interview that the school reneged on an agreement three years ago to permanently clear up the clash between tennis and baseball practice in the building. He also said the $400 he gave the school for that purpose was used for something else.

Metric Golf: Symbol-Minded Will Love It

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Fifth of Six Part

Golf clubs are not all the same length so it's handy to have a metre stick in the golf bag.

That's for playing golfometre, or golfo for short.

Golfo is a version of gimme. If a player knocks the ball to within one metre or less of the hole he can assume he sinks the ball with his next shot. Some players play gimme by the length of their golf club but this gives the person with a long club an unfair advantage. The metre stick makes it all fair.

Golfo is not at all like Greeno. Greeno is a version of golf in which any shot that lands on the green is a gimme. The gimmes can range up to 15 or 20 m, which is a bit much.

Some golfers have refined greeno by not counting the gimme. For example, they may be on the par three, 120-metre hole and they land on the green in four shots. They mark down a four. These players are usually playing by themselves. The game they are playing is not called greeno or golfo.

Golfers are always talking metres, or they will be within a very few months. Getting a shot 200 metres out in the middle of the fairway is very good. Going out 200 metres and landing in the rough is not as good.

Getting with 10 metres of the hole gives the golfer a shot at it. Anything further away is going to be awfully tough.

At the 19th hole they are always talking about the shot that was only one centimetre (1 cm) short of the hole. If the ball rims the cup and still stays out, the miss may be only one millimetre (1 mm), which everyone remembers as the thickness of a dime.

A centimetre is only half the width of a man's finger. So a miss by a hand (the width of the hand) would be a 10-centimetre miss, there being five fingers to a hand.

While golfers may talk about missing by a hand (10 cm) they no longer say they missed by a foot. There is no such word. Possibly he missed by an arm (70 cm) or a leg (90 cm) but certainly not by the lowest extremity.

Golfers always say metre or centimetre but when writing about it they usually use he symbols.

For example, this note from a Canadian golfer at Palm Springs.

"The weather was great, at least 24, as I teed off on the 500-metre par five first hole. My first shot went out 180 m right up the middle. Second shot dog-leg to the left must have been over 200 m and stayed on the fairway by 20 cm. Caught the bunker with my third but the fourth shot came exactly 1 m away from the hole. Naturally I yelled 'golfo' and picked up the ball. The guy I was playing with said he didn't understand what the ... I was talking about. It was lovely."

Most golfers have no trouble learning metres because the shaft on a driver is about that long. Millimetres are easy to learn because of coins, but the distance is seldom used. Centimetres are also rather small. The handy length is the 10 centimetre size or one decimentre (1 dm). It is handy because it is the next size smaller than one metre and also is handy because a decimetre is the width of a hand.

A horse 14 hands high is 14 decimetres or 1.4 metres. It's all beginning to make some kind of sense.

Muggers Took Savings

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter) — An 80-year-old woman said that she lost $44,000 she had carried in her purse for 11 years when she was mugged.

Olive Weiner, in good condition at a hospital here, was unable to give full details after the robbery by two teenagers as she was leaving a North Hollywood supermarket.

Speaking to reporters in the hospital about the contents of her purse, she said:

"I thought it was the safest place to keep the money. I had the money there for 11 years. My brother willed it to me when he died. The money in my purse all this time."

She said she will have to go on welfare.

Swept Away . . . on a Sea of Stridency

Two movie reviews by Nora Hutchison

Swept Away By an Unusual Destiny in the Blue Sea of August is about politics — and intuitions of love. It is directed by Lina Wertmuller, an Italian film maker with wide-ranging political concernes, and expands on some of the themes of her last film — Love and Anarchy: political and social oppression, and the conflicts that often exist between love and sex. Swept Away has moments of wit and style, but mainly it's a raucous, abrasive move that quite belies the enticing title, and disappoints with its strident tone.

An Italian yacht cruises the smooth blue waters of the Mediterranean. The atmosphere aboard ought to be soothing, sun-filled and contemplative, instead it's hectic with the shrill yapping of a bitch goddess — the wife of a Milanese industrialist — who drapes herself seductively around the mast in a black bikini.

She (Mariangela Melato) and her guests argue long and violently over the pros and cons of capitalism and Marxism — and settle everything in their favor. Meanwhile, the crew, who are mostly communists, boil with irritation. She complains bitterly about their smelly T-shirts, about the over-cooked spaghetti, about the re-heated coffee. Her husband watches, amused.

The cruise continues, and the Latin clamor goes on, unabated. She orders a dinghy to ferry her to a grotto where her guests are swimming. The motor fails, the deckhand with her (Giancarlo Gianni) cannot repair it quickly enough. The current catches them, and they are adrift at sea. She pummels him verbally — he is contemptible, useless, and smelly, but what else could she expect from a Sicilian?

Eventually, they are swept to an uninhabited island — and his masculine fury erupts. If she wants food, shelter, comfort — she must work.

Money doesn't matter here, she begins to learn, but ingenuity does. The master-slave relationship reverses itself. To stay alive, she must obey him — now, who belongs to whom? Predictably, she comes to adore him in his primitive state — and enjoys being vanquished. But he falls in love with her, and that's a different matter.

He lets them be rescured — although she doesn't want it — as a test of her love, and the two are returned to civilization. With the reward her husband has given him, he buys her a topaz ring, and waits at the dock for her to return with him to their island, as she'd half-promised to do. But with her husband and friends about her, the island experience — the adventure in paradise — begins to lose its idyllic charm.

The compliancy and naturalness he uncovered on the island, is subjugated to the caustic humor that's more her style.

She flies away in a helicopter — it's easier to believe that it was just a messy incident. He renounces her as an industrial whore, renounces all women, and then goes home with his tearful wife.

A million lira, wasted, he knows, on a piece of junk jewellery.

Swept Away has some very good moments. Visually, the film has great style the camera work is fluid, the editing neatly elliptical. And some of the dialogue is very wise and funny — Wertmuller has a feel for the white heat radiated by rich Latin ladies. But a good deal of her film is off-putting — she stages her endless ideological arguments at a very high decibel level, and they are quickly tiresome. Too much of this movie lies in the abstract — there's not enough heart-felt energy.

The Counting House Cinema I will be opening a two-week festival of international films Friday with Japanese director Kunugasa's remarkably beautiful costume epic — Gate of Hell (1954). The festival includes several well-known works by Bergman — Smiles of a Summer Night (1955) and Wild Strawberries (1957), and Truffaut — Jules and Jim (1961) and Shoot the Piano Player (1950). Each of these films is a key work in its director's cinema, and each is hugely entertaining.

Other films worth your attention:

Louis Malle's Murmur of the Heart (France, 1971) — a delightful, exhuberant account of a teenage boy growing into manhood, surrounded by three boisterous older brothers, and a casually sensual mother. The story is set in France, in the early 1950's, and it stars Lea Massari as the mother.

Claude Lelouch's Le Voyou (France, 1970) — spoof of American gangster pictures, in which a lawyer learns the art of a master criminal. Less self-conscious than some of his other films (A Man and a Woman, Live for Life), and a lot more fun.

Martin Scorses' Mean Streets (U.S.A., 1973) — a rough, vigorous film about two young men, on the edge of gangsterdom, growing up in New York's Little Italy. One of the most interesting works of the new American cinema.

Alain Resnais' Hiroshima, Mon Amour (France, 1958) — a key work in the Nouvelle Vague — the French directors' movement of the 1960s. Marguerite Dura's screenplay deals with the interplay of memory and reality, time past and present, in a story about a love affair between a French nurse and a Japanese architect.

Kalatozov's The Cranes Are Flying (U.S.S.R., 1957) — One of the first important works of the post-Stalinist cinema. The sereenplay concerns a pair of young lovers, a soldier and his girl, who are separated when Germany invades Russia, and the focus is on the young girl as she matures into a courageous woman.

Other festival films include: Antonioni's La Notte — a dark, pessimistic study of a disintegrating marriage; Fellini's The Clowns — a childhood experience revived; Bo Widerbverg's Elvira Madigan — a highly sentimentalized account of a summer romance between a tight rope dancer and a cavalry officer; and Visconti's Death In Venice — a sumptuously photographed account of the last few days of a composer, apparently patterned after Mahler. Set in Venice in 1911.

Indian Reserve To Have Liquor

GRASSY NARROWS, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this Indian reserve about 70 miles north of Kenora voted Tuesday to allow alcohol to be brought on to the reserve for the first time.

The controversial vote, opposed by local school children, threatened to divide the band council.

A total of 138 residents were eligible to vote on the referendum conducted by the Kenora Department of Indian Affairs but only half of them turned out at the polls. The vote was 49 to 20 in favor.

An Indian affairs department spokesman said later that the results will have to be processed through Ottawa before residents can actually bring liquor back to their homes.

"It is usually a straightforward matter but the time span can vary," he said.

Although Chief Bill Fobister believes his people should be given the chance to prove they can drink socially, he said in an interview he anticipates some fighting and rowdyism initially.

"I only hope that nothing drastic will happen during this time."

The chief said he has called a meeting among all residents and the reserve's four-member detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police to discuss the legal implications of allowing liquor on the reserve, and to determine when the new law will actually come into effect.

"I want to stress to them that if booze comes in, it is up to them to drink socially. I want them to know that any violence which takes place cannot be blamed on me."

Band counsellor Steve Fobister threatened to resign if liquor was allowed. Posters which he said were prepared by elementary school sudents were hanging in their school gymnasium to protest the liquor vote.

"I think all school children are against liquor here. They're the ones who are going to have to live with it."

Steve Fosbister added that liquor should be allowed only after adequate employment and better living conditions have been achieved.

Grassy Narros OPP detachment commander Bill Bailey said in an interview Tuesday that he anticipates "a little trouble at first".

"But I think it has to come. They might settle right down and we hope this will be the case."

Roar of the Luftwaffe Still Deafens

GUERNICA, Spain (AP)—The largest air force until then ever assembled thundered toward the town. The deep growl of engines shook the air, shook the ground—and continues to shake the world.

In three hours, on a pleasant, sunny afternoon nearly 39 years ago, those aircraft destroyed most of Guernica, the ancient capital of the Basques and one of the cradles of civilization.

Guernica, nestled in a broad valley near the Bay of Biscay in northern Spain, was, and is, the spiritual home of the Basque people, with its historic parlitment building and the ancient oak tree in the parliament grounds. The tree is the very symbol of Basque culture and independence.

The town's destruction by German bombers on April 26, 1937, embodied the full horror of the Spanish civil war. Few episodes of any war attracted such a sustained outcry as that following the razing of Guernica. In terms of emotional aftershock, the bombing ranks for many with the devastation of Dresden, Hiroshima, and Nagasaki.

But the truth about the bombing has been blurred over the years by propaganda from all sides and by the skilful mixing of fact and fiction.

The new Spanish regime under King Juan Carlos still maintains that the Basques, supporting the republican army during the civil war, destroyed their own holy city and blamed the Nazis.

The republicans, on the other hand, exaggerated the death toll to more than 3,000 and said 10,000 were injured—figures still cited. Twenty-seven months of research into the destruction of Guernica, including interviews with 30 eyewitnesses of the bombing, show the death toll to have been under 500, the casualties 2,000 to 2,500.

Nobody is prepared to be more precise.

Meanwhile, Guernica is occupied.

Since Good Friday, 1975, troops, civil guards and policemen have turned this rebuilt town of 15,000 into a fortress. Gen. Francisco Franco sent in the military to prevent the Basques from carrying out plans to make last Easter Sunday the biggest commemoration of the bombing ever held.

Franco's order prohibiting the commemoration resulted in bloodshed.

The Basques blew up a Franco monument in Guernica's graveyard and dynamited four shops belonging to known Franco supporters.

The violence spread. Policemen were shot; the military became harsher. Basque priests were arrested; the sports arena in Bilbao, 20 miles away, became a makeshift internment camp to house arrested Basques.

Nowhere in Spain last year did the violence, the fears, the rekindled memories of the civil war seem more evident than in Guernica—which remains the focal point of what the Basques want: autonomy.

The 43 German bombers that helped make Guernica such a Basque focal point were part of the Condor Legion that Adolf Hitler had sent to Spain to support Franco.

All the available evidence shows that Franco knew nothing about the raid until after it occurred.

The German military archives in Freiburg establish that the actual order for the attack on Guernica, a town of 7,200 in 1937, was issued by Col. Wolfram von Richthofen, chief of staff of the Condor Legion.

The republican government represented the raid as a war crime against a totally defenceless town. But since the start of the civil war, Guernica had been a garrison town for republican troops and there were 3,000 there the day of the air raid.

In interviews with some of those soldiers and their officers—old men today—they stated that in pure military terms the air attack on Guernica was justifiable because of the military presence in the town.

But research into the bombing, including access to von Richthofen's papers, establishes that at the time of the actual raid, von Richthofen did not know there were troops in the town, although the legion was aware of enemy forces in the area.

Three days after the raid was over, Franco's troops occupied the ruins of Guernica. They discovered there been a gandists to say that there was garrison.

But by then, world opinion had been inflamed by the air raid.

Franco ordered his propa- "no air attack . . . that we have incontrovertible proof that the republicans themselves dynamited Guernica as a last desperate effort to discredit" the forces of fascism.

With considerable force this line was offered as "a contribution to histpry," and the distortions began.

Exiles Return

IRUN, Spain (Reuter) — About 100 Basque refugees, some in exile for more than 20 years, have returned home to Spain's northern Basque country, informed sources said Tuesday. The exiles, Basque nationalist members of various separatist organizations or sympathizers, crossed the border here from France after being given passports by Spanish consular officials in Paris, Bordeaux, Pau and Bayonne.

FROZEN PIPE CAUSED BLAST

WASHINGTON (AP) —The worst natural gas pipeline disaster in U.S. history apparently occurred because an underground plastic gas pipe shrank in cold weather and pulled loose from its fitting, government safety investigators say.

Eighteen persons dided and 41 others were injured when the six-storey Pathfinder Hotel in Fremont, Neb., exploded and burned Jan. 10.

The explosion knocked the hotel off its foundation, blew a hole in the first floor and dropped a street-level barber shop, drug store and coffee shop into the basement. It also blew out glass in other buildings within a one-block radius.

The explosion occurred less than 24 hours after the Nebraska Natural Gas Co., responding to reports of a gas odor, had found—and repaired—another plastic pipe in the same area which also had pulled loose.

Touch System Allows Handicapped to Cope

MONTREAL (CP) — Arthur Coccotas of Montreal is one of the most severely handicapped persons in Canada still living at home, says his doctor, K. G. Marshall, assistant dean of medicine at McGill University.

One of the reasons he can live at home is a new device called a Touch Operated Selector Control System, which transforms subtle movements into signals that can operate household facilities such as telephones or fire alarms.

Mr. Coccotas, 56, is a multiple-sclerosis victim completely paralysed except for his neck and face.

But by placing his nose on the machine's arm, which looks like a boom microphone, he can make or receive a phone call, switch on a television set or adjust the volume on a radio.

The system works through a control panel on which two lights and a number are illuminated by the touch of Mr. Coccotas' nose on the arm.

Another touch and the number, indicating which function the machine is being asked to perform, changes. Numbers range from one to six at present, but additional wiring can add possible functions.

Two microphones are placed near Mr. Coccotas so he can speak on the telephone — he places calls with the assistance of an operator — and a table lamp, television and radio are nearby.

The machine was provided through the national health and welfare department's prosthetic services division, which ordered 30 units and, in 1974, made one unit available to each province for evaluation.

The Quebec March of Dimes agreed to pay the costs of installing the system here and installation was undertaken by the Bell Telephone Pioneers, a volunteer group of Bell Canada employees.

Paul Roy, executive director of the Quebec March of Dimes, said the total cost of obtaining and installing the machine, developed by Toronto quadraplegic Bud Cairns, was $1,300.

Jessie Coccotas says the system is a tremendous morale booster for her husband.

Even phoning wrong numbers is a thrill for Mr. Coccotas, "because I can communicate with someone totally new."

For Mrs. Coccotas, who has a full-time job, the device provides a sense of security. "I can phone to see how he is," she says, "or tell him I'm going to be delayed."

FIVE GUNNED DOWN

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — An eight-year-old girl and four other people were killed here Tuesday during a gunfight between Chilean security police and members of the outlawed Movement of the Revolutionary Left (MIR). Susana Sanheuza was caught in crossfire as police shot down three members of the movment who had just killed a member of a police patrol.

Shawnigan Concert Tonight

A concert of vocal and instrumental music will be given in the chapel of Shawnigan Lake School on Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Special guests will be the Victoria Conservatory of Music Choir under the direction of Gladys Pearcy. Soloist with the group will be Carmen Gozdan.

Organist Herman Bergink will perform several solos including a Bach Prelude and Fugue, a suite for organ including trumpet voluntary by John Stanley, two numbers by 20th century Netherlands composers and improvisations on hymn tunes which are to be submitted by the audience.

Choral groups will include music by Bach, Kodaly and others.

PRICES 'NOT ALL FARMERS' FAULT'

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Okulitch, chairman of the British Columbia Marketing Board, says the federal food prices review board was wrong to single out the farm marketing board as the major villain in rising food prices.

Okulitch said that responsibility for food price increases must be shared by all segments of the economy.

"It's not fair to single out one group when you have inflation throughout the whole economy," he said. "Most marketing boards are honestly attempting to give farmers a fair price for their labor."

In its final report, released late last week, the board said politicians are encouraging attacks on the "relatively minor villains" of business and industry while ignoring sharp increases in farmer incomes over the last three years.

The board said producer-controlled marketing boards represent a conflict of interest because they allow farmers to control production levels and increase prices for their own benefits.

The board also said marketing boards encourage inefficient production by some farmers and allow excess profits for others.

Rally Support Urged For Transition House

TELL IT TO THE MARINES

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. court of appeals has ruled that pregnant marines are not permanently unfit for duty.

In a 2-1 decision, the court ruled Tuesday that a marine corps regulation effective in 1970 which mandated the discharge of pregnant women violated due process and their equal protection rights.

The regulation has since been modified to leave the decision on discharge up to the women themselves.

Women who agree with the need for a transition house for mistreated mothers and children have been urged to take part in the provincial Women's Rally for Action at the Legislature March 22 and to write Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm.

In protest of Vander Zalm's announced intention of eliminating grants for transition houses, the Victoria Women's Action Coalition Tuesday declared the sanctuary program an essential service.

In a statement on behalf of eight local women's groups, the coalition said eliminating the transition house will perpetuate child abuse, wife beating and destructive man-wife relationships.

The transition house (one of the five in B.C. is in Victoria) is an adaptation of the woman's shelter concept in Britain, described in the book Scream Quietly or the Neighbors Will Hear.

The women's groups feel Vander Zalm indicates the government will oppose issues and services to women on every front, and note the provincial Status of Women office has been closed and the sex discrimination committee of the education department disbanded.

COOL pose is result of work by professional sculptor Umberto Fusari of Waterloo, who carved this seven-foot high snow sculpture of a reclining man in his yard on the outskirts of the city. Snow statue is 16 feet long.

It's Time to Make Some Tasty Marmalade

By TINY BENNETT

Last week the first Seville marmalade oranges appeared in my local store and they were of high quality and quite inexpensive.

In fact there is a really fine display of top quality citrus fruit around at this time, including large navel oranges, big red grapefruit, lemons and smaller less sweet oranges.

Add this reasonably priced fruit to the considerably lower price sugar and it adds up to the fact that it is time to make marmalade.

I make about 40 pounds of very thick English or Scottish Dundee marmalade every year at a saving of at least $25—compared to buying the best imported product.

It is a fun time to make and bottle preserves, because the glorious smell of the bubbling mix and the warmth of the kitchen are in direct contrast to the ugly weather outside. The reason for this winter-weather preserve making is the fact that February and March are the prime months for the pick of the citrus crop, plus it is only at this time that the very bitter Seville-style oranges are available.

People's tastes in preserves naturally vary, but I have found that the very heavy-cut Seville orange marmalade is pretty well universally popular.

However while my standard recipe is based around the bitter, almost juiceless, and pit-filled Sevilles, readers prefering a sweeter preserve, can simply substitute inexpensive sweet oranges.

If Sevilles are not available in quantity at a reasonable price, use a couple and substitute with a combination of sweet oranges and a sweet grapefruit. I believe in using a good mix of fruit, as this blends in a very delicious and different flavor to the finished product.

This is one of my rule of thumb recipes, in which the preparation of the fruit is important, since all the peel and pulp of the fruit is used and only the pits are discarded. And since the skin, even when thinly sliced, is pretty tough, I pre-soak the sliced fruit in water for 24 hours, before starting to boil it down.

TINY'S OLD COUNTRY MARMALADE

Take a mixture of Seville and sweet oranges, a grapefruit and a couple of lemons, slice extremely thin across the grain and put into a large soaking pot. And for every cup of fruit, add 2¼ cups hot water from the tap, cover and soak for 24 hours.

Then boil uncovered for at least four hours.

You should considerably reduce the level and the liquid in order to get the preserve softened but still a shade crisp to the bite. Taste carefully at this stage of the game, it will really make you pucker up.

The next step is one of those wonderful rule of thumb guides that calls for equal measures of fruit-pulp juices to sugar. This best done in fairly small quantities at a time.

Into a heavy pot, measure three cups thoroughly stirred fruit, three cups sugar and boil up on fairly high heat, stirring and skimming away foam, until a candy thermometer registers 220. This takes a fair tife and must be watched carefully since the thermometer hangs fire for awhile and then zooms up.

Repeat until all the fruit is used. As each batch finishes, allow to cool, off the heat, for 10 minutes, stirring now and then to even out the fruit peel; pour into sterile jars; pour over a thin layer of melted paraffin wax, followed by a second layer when the first sets.

If your fruit is a bit on the green side and you use lemons in your mix, there will be no problem with getting a set if you raise the preserve to 220 on the candy indicator.

Too little heat and your marmalade will be runny, too much and it will go too dark and thick.

I usually manage to bottle at least one or more batches that when cool, prove to be sloshy in the jars. In this case all I do is carefully remove the wax seal, pour it back into the pot and re-heat until it sets properly. Wash the wax under a hot tap, re-melt and, after clearing and sterilizing the jars, put the reset preserve back together again.

If you don't have a candy thermometer test for a set by pouring a little into a saucer and cooling in the fridge.

This is an excellent and sturdy product that will be a delight if prepared properly.

Golden Winter Squash Adds Own Rich Flavor

HILDA BEASTALL

Winter squash will be with us for a few more weeks, either from our own stored fruits or as chunks bought from vegetable displays. Of the two, or own smaller fuits give better food value because we don't need to expose a cut surface to light and air, causing vitamin losses.

However, a bought chunk, if it has the appearance of being recently cut and is enclosed in a wrapper, is still a fair buy. These cuts are usually priced around 10 cents a pound. Sometimes we find a small whole Hubbard squash to buy and cut ourselves as needed.

Apart from vitamin values, traces of minerals and other benefits, golden winter squash adds its own rich, rather sweet flavor to any dish, and acts as a thickening agent.

A pleasant vegetable soup in winter is composed mainly of a few mushrooms and a small chunk of winter squash. The two flavors blend unexpedtedly well.

Mushroom-Squash Soup

1 whole garlic clove
½ pound piece winter squash
1 cup diced mushrooms (3 or 4 ounces)
1 Tbsp chopped parsley, kale or chervil
¼ tsp salt
spoonful cooked carrot (leftover)
paprika

Pell whole garlic clove after soaking 3 minutes in boiling water to loosen outer skin; it lifts easily with sharp knife.

Shave off the hard squash skin with potato peeler. Dice the orange flesh and put into saucepan with garlic and boiler water to cook until tender, 15 or 20 minutes. Mash in same saucepan with the water. Add the washed and diced mushrooms with finely chopped parsley, kale or chervil.

Simmer gently 3 to 5 minutes until mushrooms are barely tender. Too much heat and long cooking spoils mushrooms. If more liquid is needed for volume of coup, add either some saved vegetable stock or hot water. A tablespoon of skim milk powder makes up more protein. Add salt — the least amount is best with mushrooms or their delicate flavor is smothered. Add carrots, heat again.

Will serve 3 for a lunch; sprinkle with paprika.

Now for a satisfying supper dish for two. Some kind of fresh fruit will complete the meal.

This dish can be made entirely on top of the stove in about 35 minutes, or prepared a little ahead of time and browned lightly in a casserole dish in a heated oven for 15 minutes if the oven heat is wanted for other baking.

Cheesed Squash

4 cups diced winter squash
1½ cups diced potatoes
½ tsp salt
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
2 small eggs
2 Tbsp skim milk powder
2 Tbsp wheat germ
1 Tbsp brewer's yeast (torula)
1 Tbsp chopped parsley

Put squash and potatoes into saucepan, barely cover with boiling water. Simmer 15 minutes or until fork tender. Drain; keep liquid for later use. Mash.

Add salt, grated cheese and eggs. Beat with wooden fork.

Add remaining ingredients and fluff up with fork.

Now either reheat without boiling, or turn into greased casserole to reheat in slow oven at 135 deg. C. Makes a meal for two.

Candied squash is liked by many people who also like candied yams. By using less sweetening, and serving with boiled onions or steamed Brussels sprouts or broccoli, this squash will appeal to more people, for it is both tasty and nutritious.

Candied Winter Squash

4 cups large diced squash
¼ tsp salt
paprika
1 Tbsp brown sugar
1 Tbsp fresh lemon juice
2 Tbsp soft margarine.

Cook the diced squash in just enough boiling water to cover. Simmer 15 minutes until tender. Drain, keeping liquid for use later.

Add salt and remaining ingredients; toss to mix all, but do not mash down. Reheat, but do not boil.

Serve on crisp toasted whole-wheat bun with suggested choice of vegetable. Will serve two.

Next is a winter Vegetable Casserole using winter squash, eggplant, celery, onion, and canned tomatoes.

This dish cann also be made entirely on top of stove, or finished in a fairly hot oven for ½ hour.

Winter Vegetable Casserole

1 medium onion, sliced thin
½ green pepper slivered (optional)
2 Tbsp soft margarine
1 stalk and leaves celery, sliced thin
½ Eggplant, sliced thin
1 pound winter squash, sliced thin
4 whole small canned tomatoes
¼ tsp fine fresh thyme
1 Tbsp chopped fresh parsley
a pinch of powdered ginger
¼ tsp salt.

Cook in covered pan, onion and green pepper in margarine until limp. Add celery sliced thin; simmer, still covered, until almost tender.

If cooking entirely on top of stove — now add other vegetables in layers. Do not mix.

Place drained tomatoes on top, reserving liquid to add if needed a little later; or use as a drink.

Mix herbs and salt in a cup; sprinkle over vegetables.

Cover, and simmer gently for ½ hour. Check for moisture need and progress of cooking by testing squash pieces with fork. If more steam is needed add some tomato juice gradually.

This will serve 4 or more according to what you choose to go with it for a meal.

If wanted as an oven dish — cook onion, pepper and celery as suggested above. Then put this into a lightly greased oven casserole having a lid. Add remaining vegetables in layers; sprinkle with mixed herbs. Cover, and cook in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for ½ hour or until squash tests tender with a fork.

Uncover and bake for another 10 minutes. With pan-cooked turbot fish, makes a lovely dinner for family or visitors.

The diversity of vegetables offers the chance to use small quantities of the supplies you may have bought for the week, yet even without much planning ahead delicious meals are put together at low total cost.

Free For The Asking

DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend of mine says bare elbows are the in thing with dogs, and not to worry about it. Both of his dogs have them and he doesn't worry. I'll admit I don't worry much. Sylvia's had her bare elbows for four years. Really, though, I think she'd look better without them. Is there any kind of goop to use on them that would help the hair grow back? —P.C.

DEAR P.C.: Bare elbows fashionable? No, not really, though many canines, particularly those large or those corpulent, have them. Those bare, actually calloused, areas are around on the outside of the leg from the elbow, but when the dog lies down you'll notice that's the area that hits the hard surface and that usually is the problem. continual pounding of that skin, on a hard surface over a period of years, produces initially hard callouses. These may thicken further, become softened, infected, and sensitive. They may eventually develop into low grade tumor tissue. Once callouses form, there's no magic hair restorer worth the name. Protective padding will keep the callouses from becoming worse, however. If the tissue's already becoming thickened and irritated, then medication may be helpful, but only if the canine consistently lies only on soft surfaces. Advanced problem cases frequently require major surgery. Even this may only partly correct the problem, so prevention is prudent.

Magnesium's Role Being Unlocked

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

We are continually making new discoveries about the various nutrients essential to maintaining health, and the one that is enjoying a good deal of attention at the moment is magnesium. In a recent report in the National Academy of Sciences Journal, a molecular biologist, Harry Rubin, suggests that this mineral is vital to the control of growth and metabolism of body cells.

Indeed, Dr. Rubin's experiments indicate that insulin and a number of other familiar hormones may function by binding or releasing magnesium within the cells. If further research proves that Dr. Rubin is correct, he will have provided another milestone in our understanding of the role of magnesium in the body.

Even now, no one questions that magnesium is essential to health. The body contains about 28 grams — that's a little under an ounce — with 70 per cent in the bones and most of the rest in the cells of the soft tissues, especially the liver and skeletal muscles.

We know, for instance, that magnesium is essential as an activator of enzymes, especially those involved in energy metabolism as well as for the regulation of body temperature, the synthesis of protein and the proper contraction of nerves and muscles.

Small amounts also circulate in the body fluids and help regulate the balance of acid and alkaline in the body. It was with this form of magnesium that Dr. Rubin was concerned in his experiments, in which he found that growth and metabolic processes were slowed down in chick embryo cells that were deprived of magnesium. When magnesium was once again made available to the cells, growth and metabolism returned to normal.

From experiments with magnesium-deficient animals, we know that deprivation of the mineral produces a range of symptoms. For example, young rats purposely fed a diet devoid of magnesium quickly develop bright red areas on their ears, tails and feet as the blood vessels just below the sking begin to swell. This dilation of blood vessels is eventually reversed, and as the vessels constrict, the skin becomes pale and even blue.

Next, many of the animals become irritable; some develop violent, even fatal convulsions. Other animals may not show these acute symptoms and may even continue normal growth. But they almost always develop widespread calcium ddeposits in soft tissues, including the blood vessels and the kidneys.

Monkeys fed a diet high in cholesterol and low in magnesium develop more extensive hardening of the arteries than they do when the high-fat diet contains sufficient magnesium. And guinea pigs develop stiffness in the joints, whereas dogs show abnormalities in the joints and tendons.

Human beings with magnesium deficiency show similar nervous and muscular symptoms. We see magnesium deficiencies most often in alcoholics, infants with acute protein deficiency, called "kwashiorkor," surgical patients on certain highly restricted diets, people who have extremely deficient diets, such as white rice or tea and white toast, or patients who are on especially high levels of diuretics for long periods.

All of this interest in magnesium may come as something of a mixed blessing. The public will undoubtedly become more aware of yet another vital nutrient, and the need for a balanced diet will be reinforced. But unfortunately, whenever a nutrient gets "in the news," we can expect a rash of claims that it can cure whatever ails you. Far too many people will dose themselves on the premise that if a little magnesium is useful, the more you take the better. But alas, as with other essential nutrients, more definitely is not better.

The Recommended Dietary Allowance for magnesium has been set at 350 milligrams per day for adult men and 300 per day for adult women. The RDA for children ranges from 150 to 250, and for pregnant and lactating women, 450 milligrams per day.

A diet that contains any of the number of sources of magnesium will fulfill these requirements. Whole grains, nuts, dried beans and green leafy vegetables are fine sources. Oats are especially rich in magnesium, which is another argument for old-fashioned oatmeal as a breakfast cereal. Milk, fish and shellfish, particularly shrimp, also are good sources.

A good deal deal of magnesium is lost during food processing, to be sure. Rice and white flour, for example, have only about 20 per cent of the magnesium that is found in whole grains. But if you eat a diet that contains a variety of unprocessed, or lightly processed foods, you will already be getting enough magnesium for you body to carry on its various vital functions.

Trucks at Grave

CALGARY (CP) — Trucker Alvin Haase of Calgary, killed last week in an accident which pinned him in the cag of his vehicle, was buried Tuesday surrounded by the men and machines that had occupied his life.

A procession of 26 trucks, driven by employees of Canadian Freightways Ltd., where Haase worked for 13 years, moved to a Calgary cemetery. The trucks were parked by the graveside as the last ceremonies were conducted.

Employees and trucks from several other city firms also participated.

The truckers said their procession was "a last show of friendship for a man who would give you the shirt off his back," but it was also a protest against the standard of driving in Calgary.

"There's just no respect on the road any more," said Freightways driver Harry Prizbill.

"We hope the sight of the trucks in this procession will have an impact on city drivers and get them to slow down."

Haase, 48, was killed one day before he was due to receive a company award for four years of accident-free driving.

Pecan Pie: Hard on Diets But Ever So Delicious

By MARY MOORE

In Miami Airport the returning tanned Canadians were gathered near the Air Canada ticketing counters and spoke to perfect strangers as if they were old friends simply because our wonderful airline brought us all together.

As you know, I am not a downgrader but there is a terrific difference in some U.S. airlines and the way Air Canada operates. I felt smug when I observed the courteous treatment our bunch was receiving compared to the hassle some passengers were going through at neighboring ticketing counters.

I met a young man the age of my son, Pete, and we found ourselves seated together on the plane. When our lufich was served the talk was about food and he said when he forgot his strict diet on weekends he had a quarter of a pecan pie.

By coincidence I had made a pecan pie for a luncheon at Margaret Brunt's in Pompano.

My seat companion immediately asked for the recipe. So I will mail this one to him.

So if you have a special occasion coming up and can justify the calories here it is.

PECAN PIE
(10" — serves 8)

NOTE: Because this is an extravagant company dish and popular and keeps well I made a large one.

Pastry:
- ¾ cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup cake-and-pastry flour
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 tbsp. butter
- ¾ tsp. salt
- About 2 tbsp. cold water

Filling:
- 4 eggs
- 2 cups corn syrup
- 3 tbsp. melted butter or margarine
- 1½ tsp. vanilla
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 1½ cups whole pecans

To make Pastry cut shortening and butter into flours and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in water, stirring with fork until you can pack the dough between your hands. Roll out on well floured board, line large deep pie plate with it, flute edge.

In a bowl beat the eggs slightly and add all remaining ingredients. Pour into pastry-lined pie plate and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 30 minutes longer or until filling is set — slightly less at centre than around edges.

This pie should be made in advance and chilled to make cutting into wedges neat. Serve with whipped cream.

CARROTS AND ONIONS SERVED WITH A FLAIR

When you are looking for an inexpensive, nutritious and tasty vegetable to serve with a meal, don't forget the carrot. Carrots, which are available all year, are an excellent source of Vitamin A and supply valuable minerals. And, as a bonus, they are low in calories.

When you buy carrots, look for the firm, smooth and well-shaped ones. Make sure that they show no signs of decay. Remember, too, that the deeper the orange color of the carrot, the more Vitamin A it contains. Store carrots in a cool room in your basement or in your refrigerator in perforated plastic bags. One pound of carrots will serve four people.

To cook carrots, use only a small amount of water and a covered saucepan for best flavour and color and a minimum of nutrient loss. Serve them "crisp tender", alone or with other vegetables. Carrots are also delicious raw or baked in a casserole.

Onions are another vegetable in good supply year round. They add that touch of zest to soups, salads or casseroles. Onions can also be cooked alone, baked or creamed.

When you're buying onions, check for firmness, good formation and shiny, dry crackly skins. You can buy them in plastic or mesh bags in 2, 3, 5, 10 pound sizes or larger. Look for the Canada No. 1 grade mark to be assured of good quality.

Store onions in a cool, dry airy place and they will last several weeks.

Onions may be stored up to a year if they are frozen at 0 deg. F. to freeze, peel the onions, chop them and pack them in measured amounts. Before cooking them, allow 90 minutes for thawing, and use them in recipes which use chopped onions.

ONIONS AU GRATIN

3 cups sliced onion
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1½ cups (6 ounces) grated cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons buttered bread crumbs

Arrange 1 cup onion in greased baking dish. Mix flour and seasonings. Sprinkle 1-3 flour mixture over onion, then sprinkle with ½ cup cheese. Repeat layers twice. Dot with butter; add water. Bake covered at 350 degrees F. until tender (about 1¼ hours). Uncover, sprinkle with crumbs and return to oven until brown (about 10 minutes more). Six servings.

CARROT A LA POMME

3½ cups cubed carrots
2½ cups sliced apple
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons butter

Boil carrots until tender. Combine carrots and apple and turn into greased baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar and paprika. Dot with butter. Bake 30 minutes at 375 degrees F, stirring occasionally. Six servings.

3 cups canned tomatoes
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. black pepper
2 tbsp. chili powder
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups red kidney beans

Saute onions and green pepper in hot oil 10 minutes. Add meat and brown over medium heat, stir frequently. Mix in next 5 ingredients; cover and cook slowly 2 hours.

BEEF AND MACARONI

1 small onion (minced)
1 20-oz. can tomato juice
1 cup boiling water
¼ tsp. thyme
1 small bay leaf (optional)
1 to 1½ cups (cooked) macaroni

B.C. SPARTANS
Look a lot like McIntosh, don't they? But there are some differences. The colour of the Spartan is a deeper, richer red; the flesh is a snowier white; the core is smaller, giving you more useable apple . . . and they have a distinctive, inviting flavour that many folks like even better than a Mac.
Why don't you give B.C. Spartans a try? You just might like them as much as McIntosh . . . even more!

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years. He's a wonderful husband and devoted father to our two children, ages 12 and 14, but he's terribly stubborn about one thing — and that is my problem:

Three months ago he was laid off from his job (machinist at an aircraft plant), so he took a job at a local department store as a salesman. His take-home pay is about one-fourth of what it was previously.

When I suggested that I also get a job to help make ends meet, he became furious. "No wife of mine is going to work," he screamed.

Abby, I know he means well, but every time I try to discuss it with him, he becomes upset. Please help. GLENDA IN GLENDALE.

DEAR GLENDA: If I can help by saying that it's no reflection on a man's masculinity if his wife works — I've helped.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been sexually active for a number of years with quite a few partners.

Now that she is in her middle 20s she is marrying one of those partners who probably knows about the rest.

We are happy for her and approve of the marriage, but she wants a white gown and veil!

We are shocked at her dishonesty and bad taste. So many of our friends and relatives are aware of her lifestyle.

We are not trying to punish her by refusing to go along with her wishes, but we're reluctant to make a mockery of what a white wedding stands for.

There must be other parents with this problem and other young people in this situation. Will you and your readers help? — DISTRESSED PARENT.

DEAR PARENT: In planning a wedding, the wishes of the bride and groom should take priority. The bride who wears a white gown and veil is not necessarily declaring herself to be a virgin.

Expert Witnesses Testify Over Collapse of Roof

A masonry contractor told county court Tuesday his firm did "good workmanship" on the walls of a warehouse where the roof collapsed in June, 1972.

Ken Toby, president of Ken Toby Limited, was testifying at the second day of his mechanic's lien action to recover $4,650 from B.C. Holdings Limited, owner of the building at 482 Cecilia.

Court was told by a civil engineer Monday that the reason for the collapse lay in the roof construction, undertaken by another company not named in court.

Toby said he began work in the masonry trade in 1946 and started his own business in 1958.

He said he inspected the warehouse site the day the roof fell down and only one wall had fallen with it.

Asked about whose responsibility it is to follow building code requirements, he said it was his firm's job to do the construction, according to plans from the general contractor or owner.

He said masonry contractors "don't really know what the code calls for" because it is difficult to understand "so you have to go by what's set out in the drawings."

He said most of the changes in the plans his firm was following were made orally on the site by the general superintendent of the project and his masonry foreman.

Cross-examined by Doug MacFarlane, representing B.C. Holdings Toby said he wouldn't agree that concrete did not fill every column erected as wall supports.

"I haven't seen one picture that can prove that yet," he said when asked if there was not concrete in every column.

He said he didn't know if the walls complied with the building code because "we are not that familiar with the code."

Asked if one column contained no concrete at all, he said "no it couldn't be."

Structural engineer Christopher Barrett, called by MacFarlane, said he inspected the site after the roof collapse. Asked if it was a defect in the construction of the roof trusses which caused the collapse, he said "yes, that's correct."

He said the masonry work appeared good from the outside but a close look at details revealed "serious defects" in workmanship, particularly filling of cores with concrete.

In some cases, steel reinforcing coming from the foundation was not long enough to overlap with reinforcing bars placed inside the columns.

Mortar droppings in some of the cores prevented the concrete from getting to the base and surrounding the metal bars, he said.

One column had no reinforcement in it and two or three had one of the four reinforcing bars missing, he said. One column had no bars and no concrete, he said.

He said "25 per cent or thereabouts" of the columns had gaps in the concrete and he was "somewhat perturbed" to find mortar not bonding to masonry.

He said defects in masonry over-all were "moderate' and the work was "quite poor."

Cross-examined by Alan Patterson, representing Ken Toby Limited, Barrett agreed he didn't make any tests of mortar and the design of the warehouse "seems quite inadequate."

Asked if deficiencies in the wall contributed to the fall of the roof, he said "no, I don't think they did."

Asked by Judge L. F. Cashman how long the walls would have stood if the roof hadn't collapsed, Barrett said "the likelihood is that they would have lasted for quite a while."

But, he added, possibly one area of the wall could have fallen from stress from an earthquake and wind.

The case continued today.

Sore Back? Try the 'Y'

A health program designed for people who suffer back pain and low back discomfort will start March 1 at the Victoria YM-YWCA.

The six-week program will be held on Mondays and Thursdays either at 9:30 a.m. or 10:45 a.m.

"A Number of Ys across the United States are using this program with good results," Rosemary Donald, service co-ordinator said. "So far Victoria is the only Y offering it in Canada."

Betty Neary, a volunteer Y instructor, who received her certification as a trained instructor in this program, will be in charge.

Donald said registration is limited and should be made at the main desk at the Y building at 880 Courtney Street.

B.C. Taxation Commission Opens Third City Meeting

The B.C. Taxation Commission opened three days of hearings in Victoria today which will include presentations from churches, the agricultural and forest industries and municipal governments.

Hearings are being held in the Oasis room at the Century Inn.

The commission, under chairman Robert McMath, was formed almost a year ago to examine all aspects of property taxation. It has held two previous sittings in Victoria.

A joint presentation related to the tax status of church property was made by Anglican and Roman Catholic Church this morning, followed by a brief from the B.C. Federation of Agriculture this afternoon.

Thursday will see briefs presented by the Society of B.C. Assessment Consultants and the Canadian Petroleum Association as well as several logging interests.

The Capital Regional Board, Oak Bay and Victoria will make presentations Friday as will the Canadian Restaurant Association and a strata title development group.

Trustees Won't Define System

The Greater Victoria school board will not pre-define the philosophy of the new Torquay elementary school in Gordon Head, trustees decided Monday.

At the last of a series of special meetings to deal with planning recommendations of assistant superintendent Dr. John Wiens, trustees agreed staff hired at the new school would define the philosophy in conjunction with administration.

Trustee Janet Baird, who heads the board's construction and maintenance committee, said today the school is designed to relieve crowding at Gordon Head Elementary and it would be "foolish" to define the school philosophy which might not meet the parents approval.

The board also decided against designating Doncaster and Rockheights elementary schools as more-structured Sentinel like schools.

The board feels that if a strict definition was imposed, school staffs could find themselves trying to reproduce exactly the Sentinel type. Instead the philosophy should mature itself.

A petition signed by 60 parents requesting that another alternative school similar to Northridge elementary be designated was received by the board. Although the board would "like to see another alternative, I don't think we can do it at this point," said Baird.

Two portables will be moved to Sundance less-structured alternative school and pupils in Grade 8 or 9 during the coming year will be permitted to remain. Special subject instruction such as home economics and industrial education will be provided at S. J. Willis.

A search for a suitable site on Edgelow will continue for a possible new elementary school in that area, but the board will assess the need before plans for the school are completed.

The board and administration will also examine opportunities for filling six empty classrooms at Braefoot elementary.

Trustees watered down a proposal that would have designated Braefoot as the school to house a Montessori program after the board was told the principal did not favor the move.

The Montessori program will now be "considered" for location there.

The present Mt. View school buildings will be used to accommodate pupils in kindergarten to grade 7 if there is not sufficient space at McKenzie elementary in September, the board decided.

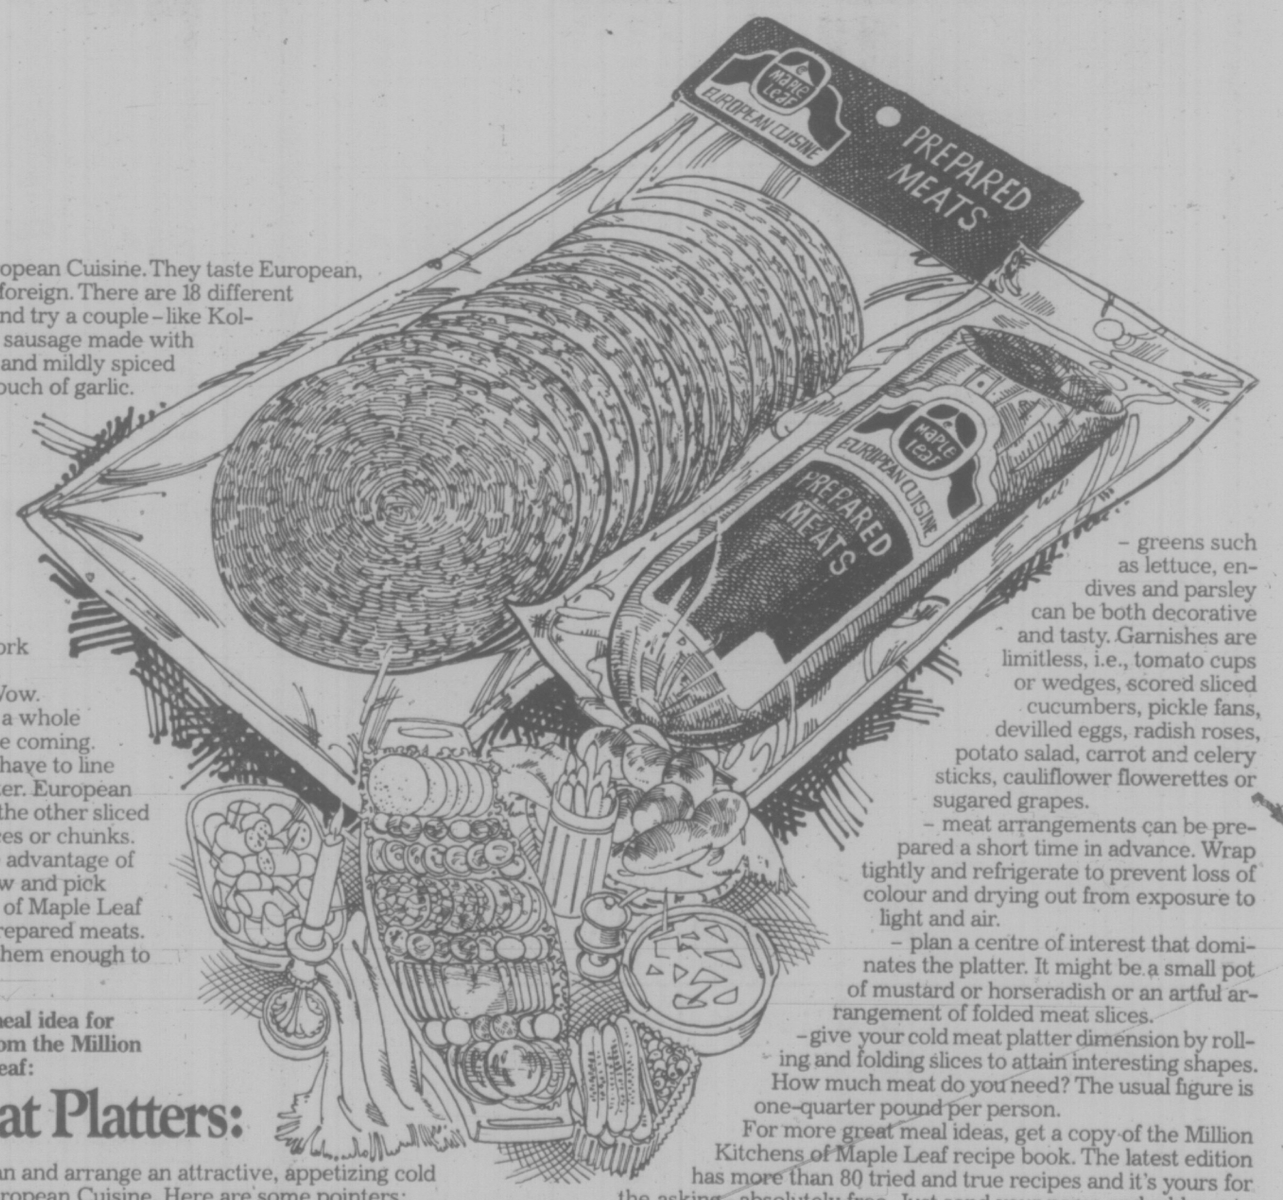
20 cents says you'll buy our European Cuisine prepared meats.
The taste says you'll buy them again.



Maple Leaf European Cuisine. They taste European, but they don't taste foreign. There are 18 different kinds, so go ahead and try a couple – like Kolbassa, the Ukranian sausage made with richly smoked pork and mildly spiced with pepper and a touch of garlic. Or try some Summer Sausage, made with lean beef and pork and seasoned with a blend of salt, pepper, ginger, coriander and nutmeg. Umm. Or go for the hot stuff, Pepperoni – finely chopped beef and pork and highly seasoned with Italian spices. Wow.

See, you've got a whole new taste experience coming. And you don't even have to line up at the meat counter. European Cuisine is in with all the other sliced meats, packed in slices or chunks.

This week, take advantage of the 20¢ coupon below and pick up a package or two of Maple Leaf European Cuisine prepared meats. We think you'll like them enough to buy them again.

A great buffet meal idea for European Cuisine from the Million Kitchens of Maple Leaf:

Cold Meat Platters:

It's not difficult to plan and arrange an attractive, appetizing cold meat platter with European Cuisine. Here are some pointers:
– variety is the key. Choose meats of contrasting colour, shape, flavour and texture.
– greens such as lettuce, endives and parsley can be both decorative and tasty. Garnishes are limitless, i.e., tomato cups or wedges, scored sliced cucumbers, pickle fans, devilled eggs, radish roses, potato salad, carrot and celery sticks, cauliflower flowerettes or sugared grapes.
– meat arrangements can be prepared a short time in advance. Wrap tightly and refrigerate to prevent loss of colour and drying out from exposure to light and air.
– plan a centre of interest that dominates the platter. It might be a small pot of mustard or horseradish or an artful arrangement of folded meat slices.
– give your cold meat platter dimension by rolling and folding slices to attain interesting shapes.
How much meat do you need? The usual figure is one-quarter pound per person.

Diamonds Shine in Israel

TEL AVIV ((WP) — Moshe Schnitzer sifted a few million dollars worth of diamonds, almost too casually, as he said "We've come a long way." For the president of the Israel Diamond Exchange, the long way extends from a refugee shack to a plush office in the gleaming 28-storey building that houses the world's leading gem bourse.

Schnitzer was one of a handful of Israeli gem cutters who started business with meager resources and makeshift facilities in backyards and rundown storefronts more than two decades ago.

Today, the diamond industry is Israel's single largest earner of hard currency with a total turnover of over $550 million annually and net earnings exceeding $140 million.

This is ahead of citrus export earnings; only tourism, which brings in about $200 million a year, tops diamond exports.

The spectacular success of Israel in the arcane world of diamond trade has given rise to a humorous reference to gems as "Israel's best friends."

Indeed, the diamond industry now employs about 15,000 people, more than two-thirds of them in about 700 plants. Along with Antwerp, New York, Johannesburg and Amsterdam, Tel Aviv is one of the world centres of diamond commerce; and in the field of medium-sized gems, Israel is the world's principal exporter.

While Jews had long been prominent in the world diamond industry, the centres of it were traditionally in Belgium and Holland.

In the last century, either by their sheer economic power or by virtue of diamond deposits, South Africa, the United States, Russia and India have had similar status.

Israel, in the other hand, is economically weak and does not have any diamond deposits.

But the Israeli diamond business had started with a handful of Belgian and Dutch Jews who escaped from the Nazis at the outbreak of the Second World War and settled here.

Schnitzer, who escaped from Romania with his parents in 1938, entered the art by the regular route.

At 21, he went to work as a diamond cutter for $4 a week, and three years later, in 1945, he was made foreman in a small plant here.

But after the war's end, when Belguim and Holland got back into business, the diamond cutting and polishing plants in Palestine were shut down. Schnitzer, and 25 other unemployed Jewish cutters then decided to go into business on their own.

In the immediate post-war years, Israeli diamond men depended largely on family connections, including those with Europe and the United States; but even for skillful cutters it was difficult to break into the business without significant resources.

Schnitzer's success is illustrative of those of his colleagues. He started with a capital of $5,000, realizing that he would have to sacrifice profit margins and rely on fast turnover to bring in cash needed for purchases of rough diamonds.

Moreover, Schnitzer and his colleagues sensed a change in the postwar economies. With new affluence first in the United States and later in Europe and Japan, smallerr diamonds came within the pocketbook range of middle-class women, and even lower middle class women.

The best to you from Palm.

Bloom Fading Fast In Iran Oil Boom

TEHRAN (WP) — Just two years after an unprecedented economic boom sent Iran's expectations soaring, a combination of bungled planning and poor oil sales have made it dismayingly clear to the government here that the bloom is off the boom.

Although the government insists that there will be no lapse in Shah Mohamed Reza Pahlevi's plans to make Iran a contender for economic power with the industrialized nations of the West, some top officials concede that there will be a "slowdown."

"We have not crossed out any major projects," planning minister Abdol Majid Majidi said in an interview, "but we have slowed down on some."

Projects which Majidi said would be deferred were three civil airports in various parts of the country; a number of crucially needed roads, including a 1,000-mile, six-lane highway between the Persian Gulf port, Bandar Abbas, and the central industrial town, Qum; a persian gulf dry dock, and an increase in hospital services which would have added 6,000 beds to the country's inadequate health care system.

The delays may be as long as three years, Majiki said. Another source said that plans to add 2 million telephones to the strained communications network would be set back by three years.

Whether or not the slowdown will significantly affect Iran's massive defence buildup, personally guided by the shah, is unclear. A few days before the government announced a 9.5-cent per barrel reduction in the price of its heavy grade of crude oil last week, Vice Minister for War Gen. Hassan Toufanian said the government was considering not buying advanced F-16 fighter planes from the United States because of the increasing price.

There are also some indications that plans to build a strategic naval base at Chawbahar, Iran's door to the Indian Ocean, have become bogged down.

Hoveyda and other government leaders recently warned that unless Iran's oil income increases quickly, the shah will reduce arms purchases which, at some $10 billion have made this country the U.S. pentagon's leading customer.

This, Hoveyda said, would be a threat not just to Iran's own security but to the safety of the entire West, because of Iran's strategic position on the Hormuz Strait, which the shah calls the Persian Gulf's "oil jugular."

Western military sources, however, indicate that Iran has already bought more sophisticated weaponry than it can handle.

"We believe that a strong and stable Iran is vital to U.S. interests," one of these sources said. "But we also believe that a slower pace would be wiser."

As an example, he said, Iran's recent decision to reduce its order of six Spruance class naval destroyers to four was "a smart move, because there's no way they're going to build a blue water (ocean-going) navy out of a force of 15,000 men overnight."

In military purchases and in other areas, Iran's basic planning flaw appears to be that the government bought too much too soon. According to a Western economist, commitments for all purchases during the past two years exceeded available funds by one-third.

"When the bills came in," the economist said, "They realized they'd gone in over their heads, but they couldn't do much about it in the two areas of greatest expenditure — defence and food grains."

Even if the Shah had wanted to make major cuts in his arms spending, and most observers consider this unlikely given what one Western diplomat termed the ruler's "insecurity phobia," high cancelation fees would make the practice too costly.

As to grain imports, Iran has long had to buy food abroad and with rising expectations generated by official promises, there would undoubtedly be widespread dissatisfaction if basic commodities were cut back.

Tehran housewives complain regularly about constant shortages of a variety of meats, vegetables and fruits — all imported. But these shortages are due not so much to reduced spending as to backups of delivery ships in Iranian ports..

These logjams have contributed to the country's economic malaise. Until last week, the government was paying an estimated $1 million a day in penalty fees to shipping companies for their vessels' wasted time in port.

"The government can blame the oil companies all it wants," said the editor of a major Tehran newspaper, "and in part this is right. But the fact is that the government itself miscalculated terribly on world oil consumption last year and we spent money like it was water. They seemed to forget that this is a country in which water is as precious as oil.".

Hoveyda insists that this overspending was done "with open eyes" and that the sole reason for Iran's current $2 billion budget deficit is the failure of Western oil companies to live up to their "commitment" to buy nearly 5 million barrels of Iranian oil daily during the last year.

The announced cut in oil prices is an admission that Iran left the companies with no choice but to buy their heavy oil more cheaply elsewhere in the Persian Gulf. It was obviously a step taken in desperation.

Royal Family Is Backbone Of Graft System

TEHRAN (WP) — With a great blare of publicity, the Iranian government has started a campaign to root out the widespread and growing corruption in the country, but it seems unlikely that there will be a crackdown on those who are perceived here to be the worst offenders — the Royal Family.

"It remains to be seen," said a prominent lawyer who represents many large foreign corporations here, "whether there'll just be a few sacrifical lambs, or if they'll go after the big bad wolves. I think the first alternative is the route they'll take. To take the second course would cause far too much embarrassment in very high place."

"Very high places" or "people at the top" is the type of euphemism commonly used by Iranians for members of the Shah's family. "There's always been a lot of smoke about corruption in the Royal Family," said a western diplomat, "but it's very rare that it bursts into flame."

Noting how other anti-corruption drives have been short-circuited, a Tehran University professor recalled a campaign last spring to eliminate profiteering. Some 7,500 businessmen were accused of price gouging.

According to the professor, Commerce Minister Fereidun Mahdavi, who led the campaign, made the mistake of touching people with connections. "Complaints against Mahdavi reached the right ears," he said. The minister was dismissed earlier this month and put in charge of administering Iran's only legal political party.

The lure for fortune-hunters is a piece of the action in Iran's vast imports bought with oil revenues. Iranian orders for military hardware from the United States alone now total about $10 billion. A U.S. official who tries to put American businessmen in touch with the proper Iranian authorities said, "When you're dealing with business on this scale, there's bound to be corruption. There's no way around it.

Although Iran's economy slipped badly last year because of reduced revenues from oil, there are still fortunes to be made in government contacts, and the fierce competition has created a thriving system of payoffs and official corruption.

"There isn't any other way," said a representative of a British prefabricated housing company. "If you're going to get to the right chap in the right ministry and then convince him that what you're flogging is better than the other chap's, well, you'd better be prepared to buy your way in."

The Shah has pledged to "wage merciless war" against such graft. But the corporate lawyer expressed doubt that Iran would ever have spotlighted its own corruption if not for the recent U.S. congressional investigations of illicit payments abroad by major American aircraft manufacturers.

"You people seem to have a penchant for washing your dirty linen in public until it's snow-white," complained the lawyer. "My French, German and British clients haven't done a thing" to comply with new Iranian government orders that they submit embassy-backed affadivits revealing all their agents and representatives in Iran. "The only firms who've registered their affadivits so far have been American."

Those few Iranians in the civil service and private business who speak to foreigners with any candor about the commonly held belief that there is corruption in high places doubt strongly that an imperially appointed investigative committee will go after the Shah's relatives.

"The reason is simple," said one well-informed Iranian, who asked that he not be identified, even obliquely. "The worst offenders are members of the royal family." Another Western diplomat supported the allegation. "Any number of the shah's relatives are on the take," he said. "Whether or not the shah knows about it, I couldn't possibly say," he added, "but at least it's not as bad as it was in the mid-60s.

A decade ago, he explained, "it was impossible to get anything done in this country without paying off someone in the royal family. By now, I guess, they've salted away enough in Swiss banks that they can afford to relax."

With Iran's enormous economic advances of the last two years, the bureaucracy has taken on many areas of decision-making that formerly were subject to royal judgments. This has created far more opportunities for illicit payoffs outside the family circle than in the old, tightly controlled days.

According to another highly informed Iranian, the shah has "laid down the law" in the past to several relatives who had been particularly blatant. In one case, according to this source, he took away the Pahlavi family name from a nephew and another relations was "sent into limbo" for five years, "until he cleared up his affairs."

One of the shah's closest relatives who continues to be surrounded by widespread suspicion is his twin sister, Princess Ashraf, a world leader in the women's rights movement. The princess, whose three marriages and jet-set living style have offended many Iranians, is said to be deeply involved in a number of "shady deals."

Plea Rejected

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Armand Hammer, 77, ailing chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp, had his request for a special bedside court session turned down Monday. U.S. District Judge Lawrence Lydict ruled Hammer must appear in Los Angeles federal court to plead to criminal charges that he made a secret $54,000 campaign contribution to former U.S. President Nixon. Hammer has been in hospital since Jan. 20 for treatment of a serious heart condition.

MAGNETIC CUSHIONED SPEEDER

MUNICH (CP) — A speed of about 250 miles an hour was attained near here by a magnetic cushion wheel-less vehicle called the Komet — a world record for this type of vehicle.

The Komet is an experimental unit developed by Krauss Maffei and Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm. It weighs nine tons.

A similar experimesntal vehicle, the Karuss Maffei Transrapid 04 weighing 18.5 tons, previously attained 120 miles an hour.

Volunteer: Fine Way to Learn

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Volunteering to help another person can be a learning experience in itself, says Shirley Kendrick of Fanshawe College in London.

The second-year social service student runs the college's volunteer bureau, which brings together people in need of help and those willing to provide it. She says the learning is not confined to those on the receiving end.

"Volunteerism," Miss Kendrick says, "provides an opportunity for training for a job and to work as a helping person in the community."

The students Miss Kendrick places work with retarded and handicapped children at the YWCA, the Red Cross blood donor clinics and the London probation office.

Cheri Linton, a second-year English and history student at University of Western Ontario is Miss Kendrick's counterpart. But her job as head of the university's volunteer bureau is not a prescribed part of her course, as it is with Miss Kendrick.

Miss Linton has six regular volunteers to help her find jobs or to fill them. Many requests are for tutors for elementary and high school students.

She says that university students in psychology and physical education courses often are required to do field work and find the volunteer bureau helps them.

The jobs range from counselling or helping at the Children's Psychiatric Research Institute to teaching retarded or crippled children how to swim.

Miss Linton says she is delighted with the enthusiasm her bids for volunteers have received. She said she was depressed when she first began working at the bureau because there didn't seem to be much interest.

Now, she says, there has been an increase in the number of men volunteering and she has no explanation for this.

Volunteering is a personal decision, she said, adding that "people must really enjoy it . . . otherwise they wouldn't do it."

Released Man Details Mozambique Terror Camps

LISBON (UPI) — A released Portuguese prisoner said Tuesday, the Marxist Mozambique government has created a string of "political re-education camps," making women work bare breasted in the fields and subjecting Europeans and Africans to hard labor, systematic torture and starvation.

"I have seen guards bury Africans up to their necks and stick knives into their mouths and African women working without anything to cover their breasts," Antonio Gandra said.

A group of Portuguese attorneys said hard labor camps in Mozambique used bare breasted Portuguese women to work in the fields under inhumane conditions.

"We have many reports that white women are being forced to strip to the waist like Africans in the Gorongosa game park and clear land infested with wild animals,' one attorney said.

Gandra, one of seven Portuguese whose release was engineered by the Portuguese government last month, said hundreds of other Portuguese, other Europeans and Africans have been sent to the camps by the pro-Marxist Frelimo government to clear land.

In the six camps where he was imprisoned along the northern border, he said the prisoners worked at least 13 hours daily on starvation diets.

"Sometimes we went five days without food and even at the best of times we only received a spoonful of maize or a small piece of breadfruit,' Gandra said.

"They made us continue working even when our hands were bleeding and many were beaten and tortured."

The attorney's group briefed foreign newsmen on the Mozambique situation after a meeting with Portuguese foreign ministry officials failed to produce a solution to the problem.

They showed documents and letters that spoke of women and men being crowded together in the same cells and subjected to extended solitary confinements, forced labor and arbitrary arrest by the Frelimo government.

Reports of deteriorating conditions in Mozambique have appeared in Lisbon for the past month, but did not move into the foreground until Lisbon granted recognition to the government of Angola's new pro-Marxist regime.

The left-of-centre Popular Democrats had objected to relations with the marxist government in Angola, also a former colony, because of the Mozambique situation.

Mozambiue achieved independence last September, ending a brutal 10-year guerrilla war between the Portuguese and the Frelimo guerrillas.

Famed Everest Conqueror Still Training, Trekking

By PAUL FINCH

DARJEELING, India (AP) — Tenzing Norgay, the Sherpa who conquered Mount Everest with Sir Edmund Hillary in 1953, has been training other mountaineers and trekking the Himalayas ever since.

"I first tried to climb Everest in 1936," says the 63-year-old Tenzing, as he prefers to be called. "After I finally did it I gave it up. But for me the training of climbers, a trek sometimes as a vacation, that is my life."

The first impression on meeting Tenzing is his ready smile. This writer joined a 19-member group in December for a highcountry trek with Tenzing as "sirdar," the professional in charge of Sherpa and Nepalese porters. After four weeks, the other strong impressions were his personal charm, sense of humor, and physical condition.

Tenzing was one of 13 children born to a peasant couple in a village in Nepal. He left home as a boy, became famous and lives now in this 8,500-foot hillside city, a traditional staging area for Everest expeditions, as a citizen of India.

"I tried to climb Everest six times before Hillary and I did it," he said. "Once, when I was very young, a crazy man from South Africa and I tried it by ourselves. We did pretty good but we had to give up. We went up the Tibet side with no permission. A lot of trouble. Crazy. I never saw him again."

More than 40 climbers—including members of an unsubstantiated climb by Communist Chinese—have reached the top of Everest, but Tenzing and Hillary were first nearly 23 years ago.

Sherpas are a small tribe with no written language and a forgotten history but they are believed to be descended from Tibetans.

Few Sherpas rise above porter status to become full-fledged climbers. Tenzing is the best-known "Tiger Sherpa," one who has distinguished himself on a major climb, usually above the 25,000-foot level.

Tenzing is tall for a Sherpa, 5 foot 8, although photos showing him next to Hillary after thir victory 23 years ago make him appear shorter next to the lanky New Zealander. He is a Buddhist who neither smokes nor drinks.

He lives in a three-storey hillside villa with his wife, four of his six children, and 25 dogs. For most of the year, he works in an office or a training camp near Everest in Nepal as director of field training for the Indian government's Himalayan Mountaineering Institute.

The institute, on sprawling hilly property a short jeep ride outside Darjeeling, is also the site of the museum on Himalayan climbers, wildlife and culture. Darjeeling, with a view of Everest and Kanchenjuga, at 28,146 feet the world's third highest mountain, is a centre for mountaineers as well as tea planters, general trade and Indian tourism.

"Every year I train hundreds of Indians and Europeans to climb," said Tenzing. "The Nepal government charges too much now to have many Everest climbing permits and the Tibet side is closed by China. But there are still many difficult mountains that never have been climbed."

Tenzing likes to talk about a 1948 trip he took to Tibet, far north of the ancient capital of Lhasa, while working for an Italian scholar, Giuseppe Tucci, whose collections of ancient scrolls and holy artifacts were sent to museums in Rome.

"From Tucci I learned Italian, broken Italian. I also speak broken French . . . and broken English."

At least once a year Tenzing is sirdar for a trek through the Singalili Ridge of the Darjeeling District across the borders of Nepal and Sikkim, annexed last year as the 22nd state of India.

He is likely to wear tennis shoes or oxfords, a white cap and a sweater or windbreaker while Europeans or Americans on the trek might be dressed for blizzards. On some treks he takes either his 10-year-old son Jamling or his 13-year-old son Norbu.

One night, around the campfire, he spoke of his climb with Hillary, recalling how they had to thaw Hillary's boots over a stove flame before the final phase of their ascent.

Tenzing does not like questions about which man actually put the first foot on top but has said over the years that it was Hillary.

Tenzing was asked about the "yeti," or abominable snowman. "I think it is a bear that people mix up with a man," he said. "I do not think it is a man. Sometimes our mountain people like to tell stories."

For some of the trekkers on the high-country journey, the finest moment was on the afternoon that Tenzing, usually a mild taskmaster, especially after a 14-mile day, urged them to hurry up a hill at the 12,000-foot level.

Over the crest was the first close view of Everest, flanked by Lhotse—27,890 feet—and Malalu—27,790 feet. To the south were the five peaks of Kanchenjunga.

They were white and towering, engraved against a flawless blue sky, with a wisp of snow blowing from the tip of Everest.

"I have never seen Everest from here with such good weather," said Tenzing. "A good view." Some thought he spoke wistfully.

Cross Relic Found

VENICE (AP) — The manks of St. George's Abbey announced today they have found a long-forgotten gold cross containing what is believed to be a rare relic of the wooden cross on which Jesus Christ was nailed.

Abbot Egidizio Zaramella said the cross was found in the Benedictine abbey's ancient archives along with documents describing it as a gift of Pope Paul V to a ruler of Venice, Doge Marino Grimani, early in the 17th century. The Doge's daughter Maria willed the cross to the abbey in 1620.

The abbot said it was one of three relics believed by Roman Catholics to belong to Christ's cross. He said the gold cross had been believed lost in the large-scale looting of monasteries and churches in Italy by the troops of Napoleon at the end of the 18th century.

Matadors Recalled

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — American Motors Canada Ltd. says it is recalling a small percentage of 1974 and 1975 Matadors to check a possible fault in the power brake booster unit.

It said 107 Matadors sold in Canada and produced between Aug. 28 and Sept. 13, 1974, at the Kenosha, Wisc., plant may contain power brake boosters that might separate when the brake pedal is slammed, resulting in loss of brakes.

Course Battles Double Standard

HAMILTON (CP) — Maureen Orton deplores the sexual double standard facing young people where society readily accepts sexuality in men but not in women.

Consequently, she is preparing a report on the first multi-disciplinary course in North America on fertility and sexuality. It ran earlier last year once a week for 18 weeks as an extension course at McMaster University in Hamilton.

It was sponsored by the university's schools of adult education, social work and the faculty of health sciences. Teachers, social workers, nurses and physicians attended the sessions, which were designed for those who do counselling and provide sex education in the schools.

"It's aim was to prepare more professionals for the job of delivering the correct information to the public and to get rid of the myths," said Mrs. Orton, who headed the group planning the course.

She said that if boys and girls are helped to recognize and handle developing intimacy in a relationship they are less likely to view sex as solely genital.

She said the sexual double standard means to women, and especially adolescent girls, that they are more caught up in denying their sexual behavior because to admit it even to themselves would mean they aren't the kind of person they should be.

Mrs. Orton, a social worker, is a writer and mother of two teen-agers. When she was at home with the children when they were younger, she began writing plays.

Some won awards in playwriting competitions. In the 1960s she was working for the Factory Lab Theatre in Toronto.

But she said she soon found out there wasn't much room for women to get anywhere.

"I think it is an inability to take women seriously," she said. "The young male actors and directors were very radical in all sorts of areas, but in regard to sex roles they are just as conservative as the Rotary Club."

Pilot Blamed

BOSTON (AP) — The chief judge of U.S. District Court ruled that negligence by the pilot and co-pilot was "the sole and exclusive cause of the accident" which killed 89 in the July 31, 1973, crash of a Delta Air Lines jet plane at Logan Airport.

Before The Judge

No new charges were read and no special security was laid on Tuesday in Victoria provincial court when Paul Joseph Desjarlais made his first appearance since last week's nine-hour hostage drama at Wilkinson Road jail.

Desjarlais, 30, was before Judge F. S. Green for only a few minutes as all of the old charges against him were given routine one-week remands pending hearings on various later dates.

One of the conditions under which Desjarlais allowed release early Friday of two guard-hostages in the jail gym was that the only action taken by authorities as a result of the incident occur outside the jail in court.

Prosecutor Scott Marshall said new charges were probable but had not yet arrived.

The old charges, all dated in early december, include escaping from William Head, theft of a boat from Pearson College, unlawful confinement of a Metchosin couple, breakins and thefts.

Desjarlais did not wear handcuffs or leg shackles and the court security staff consisted of the usual two deputy sheriffs. The only special action was to take Desjarlais directly to court from the adjacent jail rather than allow him into the waiting area with other prisoners due for Tuesday appearances.

"I'm going to have to stop doing these foolish things" was what Denis Joseph Henry Seguin, 24, of 415 Government, told police after his arrest Feb. 12, Marshall informed the judge.

Seguin pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of shoplifting two rolls of film from Shoppers' Drug Mart, 3104 Shelbourne.

Marshall said Seguin had a record of three narcotics convictions, two for possession and one for conspiracy to traffic. Defence lawyer William McElmoyle said all three cases involved soft drugs.

Green fined Seguin $300 and put him on probation for one year.

William Gerald Brine, 69, no fixed address, was put on probation for one year and ordered to pay $78 to the Empress Hotel. An alcoholic whose record went back to 1930, he pleaded guilty Feb. 20 to a Victoria charge of obtaining that much in food and lodgings at the Empress by fraud Feb. 19. Green ordered Brine to live in a Salvation Army hostel as a condition of probation.

Malcolm McMicken, defence lawyer for Ricky Milne, 20, of 2682 Dowler, entered a choice of trial in provincial court for Milne on a charge of possession of marijuana Feb. 17 in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. Trial was set by Green at May 25 for Milne, who is free on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,250 until then.

In traffic court, Richard Noel Steeds, 18, of 1244 Balmoral, pleaded guilty to two Victoria charges of driving Aug. 1 while under a licence suspension and failing to appear in court Oct. 15, and to a Colwood charge of being in care and control of a vehicle while impaired July 18, 1975. He was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to a total of one month which was added to a jail term Steeds already was serving.

Wayne Lyle Nattress, 29, of 1516 Garnet, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of dangerous driving and driving while under a disqualification Dec. 18. Allan imposed a 10-day jail term, a $300 fine and a six-month driving ban.

$86,300 Raised

Residents in the Capital district contributed $86,300 to the Kinsmen Mothers' March last month, co-ordinator Sheila Manifold said Tuesday.

She said the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of B.C. wants to thank local people for their generosity. Campaign target had been $76,000.

A total of 3,000 volunteers conducted the door-to-door canvass Jan. 25 to 31 and their enthusiasm was a major factor in its success, Manifold said.

PWA Decision Delayed

EDMONTON (CP) — Transportation Minister Hugh Horner said Tuesday it will take a few days to decide what the Alberta government's next move will be concerning its purchase of Pacific Western Airlines.

The province is studying the federal court of appeal ruling that the province is a person and must apply to the Canadian Transport Commission for approval to buy the airline.

ANCIENT BONES FOUND

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP)—The skeletal remains of two prehistoric humans have been found south of this community, about 115 miles southeast of Regina.

Prof. Patrick Hartley, of the University of Saskatchewan's anthropology department, said the skeletons, one male, one female, could be between 300 and 1,000 years old.

The remains contain part of the vertebral column, upper and lower limbs, and parts of the trunk and skull as well as two lower jaws.

He said it appears the remains were exposed above ground until the bones were cleaned and then buried.

Hartley said construction equipment uncovered the bones at what now is believed to be an ancient burial pit.

An inventory was being made of the find and the age at death and sex will be determined.

Hartley said little detailed information has been compiled on prehistoric Plains Indians.

Blended Family Problem

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Take a couple of children and a single adult. Add another adult, and maybe a couple more children. The result is an instant family, right?

Wrong, says Brian Robinson, a family therapist with the Family Development Service here.

"People think of it as mixing a cake, but it's not that at all. Shakespeare wrote that all the world's a stage—well, in a second family situation all the actors on the stage have different scripts. The goal is to co-ordinate the scripts."

For these "blended families," the family therapist can play an important role.

"The rising divorce rate is producing more such families. If couples discuss and think about the blending first, their chances for success are better than if they leave things to luck."

He said the most commonly experienced problems develop before the new family.

"The first hurdle a former husband frequently faces is the realization that another man may raise his children. He may be hit with guilt and insecurity. It's how the individual solves these first problems that gives him the later strength successfully to develop a new relationship—often a blended family."

Mr. Robinson said good relations between former spouses will avoid harm to a later marriage.

"A new relationship can present just as many—if not more—difficulties as getting married for the first time, because of all the testing that goes on.

"A mature marital relationship should allow for individuality—otherwise when a crisis occurs, the marriage may not be able to handle it."

"Former in-laws are a major area to be reconciled; money can be a problem when there are two homes to support. There may be child expenses on top of that."

He suggested that former spouses conduct a self-audit of their faults and good points, with or without the help of a therapist. Problems in the new relationship can be avoided if the former spouses and interested families get together to discuss issues such as expensive presents and visitation rights.

"Developing insights is the key. Love alone isn't enough, particularly in blended families. The partners have to develop skills of active listening and fair fighting.

"It helps to understand that former ties can be very healthy—the children may then have an extra set of grandparents to love them, for example. There are many positives to the new relationship.

"If a formerly-married spouse can think about the positive aspects of blending, then he or she can get away from the stigma of having been a 'failure.'"

Mr. Robinson said the stigma of divorce is lessening.

"It's OK to split. People who've grown bored with each other don't have to stay together and suffer through the marriage.

"It's nobody's fault; they've just grown apart. They needn't blame one another; they can blame the relationship. Then they can continue to be friends."

City Shows Sexy Movies

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — When the Capitol Theatre shows Love Hotel, Massage Parlor or Dr. Feelgood's Sex Clinic, it can count on a substantial queue at the box office.

When it shows The Best of Disney True Life Adventures, everyone stays home.

In Cornwall, that's showbiz, much to the embarrassment of Mayor Gerald Parisien and his council. The city happens to own the theatre.

It purchased the site for $135,070 in 1973 with the idea of turning it into a municipal arts centre. Since funds were not immediately available, the Capitol was leased to Markell Theatres Ltd., and council found itself in the movie business.

It also found itself the target of protests from the Stormont Christian Council and the St. Columban's Catholic Women's League over the quality of films shown in Cornwall, particularly at the Capitol.

The mayor was sympathetic but noted that the films had all been passed by the provincial censorship board and that the city cannot overrule provincial legislation.

"The only way of getting rid of those movies is for the city to break the lease with the operators and that would lose us $24,000 a year in revenue," he said.

D. L. Sims, a director of the board, said the best way of stopping the showing of sex-oriented films is for people to stay away from the theatre.

But sidewalk interviews indicated the majority had no intention of staying away. They said there was nothing wrong with sex movies and that each individual should act as his own censor.

Legal sources said the city, with the help of a co-operative Crown attorney, could try to enforce a ban on movies it considered objectionable but that it would involve a costly legal battle.

Theatre managers showed little sympathy.

The manager of the Port Theatre said Where the Red Fern Grows, a family-type film, had been one of the poorest draws of 1975, in spite of extensive television advertising.

Eric Markell of Markell Theatres said the Capitol lost $1,000 on the Disney film and attracted only 800 people to two stage performances of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

'Murders By Submission'

PARIS (AP) — A consulting engineer who had lost most of his money and was being prosecuted for tax fraud killed five members of his family with their permission and then took his own life, police said Tuesday.

"Call it a collective suicide or rather five 'murders by submission' with the killer taking his own life," a police spokesman said.

The engineer, Henri Valburg, 55, left a letter for a friend in which he said: "we've decided together to leave this society."

The bodies were discovered Monday night in the family home in Paris.

Valburg's sons, 23 and 15, his 74-year-old mother and a woman cousin were sitting in chairs in the living room, blindfolded and each with a single bullet into the heart from a carbine.

Valburg and his wife, Michele, 52, were lying on the double bed in their bedroom. She, too, had been shot in the heart, while her husband had been shot in the head. The rifle was alongside him.

The police believe the killings occurred Sunday.

A member of the family told a reporter: "Things had been going badly for the last three or four years. Henri had to close his office where he employed five or six people. He went into the cosmetics business, trying to sell beauty products by mail, but it didn't work. He could not accept this comedown, neither for himself, a person used to success, nor for his children, for whom he had great hopes."

Porch Starts Fuchsias Off Early

Only in a heated glassed-in porch or greenhouse will it be advisable to start old fuchsias and geraniums into growth this early. Even so, white fly may become a problem if soft rapid growth is permitted or encouraged.

Since many fine glassed-in porches are being used by gardeners for early starting, and heated greenhouses are again on the increase, a few suggestions for their use are given.

Fuchsias of the basket or tubbed kinds which requred some protection outdoors from frost during winter may now be put into containers, even wood boxes, for standing under a bench on the floor of the porch or greenhouse. Pack soil around roots to hold a little moisture.

If old growth is long and straggling, cut it back now to abour six inches, either from the soil line or from where low side-branches leave the main stem. moisten the soil well.

The lowest temeprature of the porch, and the greenhouse, will likely be at floor level but the general temperature will be just warm enough to start new growth on the fuchsia stems down there out of direct strong light.

As soon as growth is seen, bring the plants up to the bench or table to prevent weakening. From then on, they need strong light and sunshine when available.

Now there are two ways to proceed. If the plants have already flowered two years for you, they will be quite woody at the base and no longer capable of giving masses of flowers. The new green growths when three inches long, must be taken off as cuttings, rooted under plastic or glass, in sandy-peat-soil to make new plants for this year's flowers. Take more cuttings than you need plants — you cannot expect 100 percent success though you may get it.

Keep the old plants if you wish, repotting and nipping back each new shoot as it reaches four inches, allowing two sets of leaves to remain.

The only way to have a fuchsia covered with bloom all summer into October is to constantly reduce new shoots by half their length until about the third week of May. This applies equally to the growth of new plants from cuttings. Warmer weather at the end of May will encourage buds to set and you have a well filled out framework before putting outdoors. From then on, it is a matter of watering well every day (particularly in baskets and small tubs) and feeding liquid fertilizer at least twice weekly.

Geraniums are handled a bit differently for these are not woody plants but succulent — full of moisture until mature.

Puts the old plants up on bench or table where light is good, give a moderate watering. Within a few days new shoots show if the plants are alive. As with fuchsias, if the geraniums have bloomed for two years, you take a few cuttings to make new plants, for even these succulent geraniums become woody in time.

Although August is the best time to start plants for the following year's full-flowered display (this applies to both geraniums and fuchsias) now you take off new shoots when three inches long to make your new plants.

Strip off the two lowest leaves; allow base of geranium cuttings to seal over with a film (two or three hours). Then set them carefully into a pot of sandy soil with a half inch of fine dry sand on top, allowing some of the sand to trickle into the hole as it is made with a round piece of wood. Set the base of the cutting on the bottom of the hole. Do NOT water.

Leave pot in good light, not direct sun. After three days, put a teaspoon of water over the sand surface of a four-inch pot holding about six geranium cuttings. Continue this every second day until definite signs of rooting are seen as indicated by new growth in the top of each cutting. Then give slightly more water — never enough to saturate the soil.

Pot all cuttings, fuchsias and geraniums, each in its own three or three-and-a-half-inch pot as soon as roots are formed. Keep in full light and moderate warmth to prevent soft growth. The aim is for short, bushy, strong growth capable of bearing the maximum crop of flowers later in the season.

There is some one who
misses you sadly,
And finds the time long
since you went,

There is some one who thinks
of you always,
And tries to be brave
and content.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,
Silent the voice we loved
to hear;

'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,
The best are always
the first to die.

Servicing Aid Limits Laid Down

Individual housing units that meet other guidelines for the federal government's new 1,000 per unit servicing grants to municipalities must also cost no more than $45,000, Saanich municipal planner Gil Laurenson said Tuesday.

Laurenson told the lands, planning and housing committee the guidelines for floor densities set by the federal government were the maximums. For apartments, bachelor suites must be no large than 400 square feet; one-bedroom suites 600 square feet; two-bedroom 800 square feet; three-bedroom 1,000 square feet, and four-bedroom 1,200 square feet.

A one-bedroom townhouse can be no larger than 650 square feet, two-bedroom 900 square feet and three-bedroom 1,100 square feet.

In addition, Laurenson told the committee apartments must be built on land that has been serviced for more than five years at a density of 10 to 45 units per acre.

Townhouses must have a denity of 10 to 30 units per acre to qualify and must be built on land that has been recently serviced or is about to be serviced.

Laurenson said the grants, which are to help municipalities with servicing costs, are retroactive to Nov. 1, 1975, and will be available until December, 1978.

He said it would appear Saanich will receive $42,000 as its first grant for 42 units that qualify at the Norman Isherwood development on McKenzie, Quadra and Kenneth.

Laurenson said he will get more details from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

HUMORIST SMITH DIES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — H. Allen Smith, newspaper man, author and humorist whose irreverent pokes at humanity enlivened more than three decades, died here Tuesday.

Smith, 69, was the author of more than 40 books, including an unpublished biography of his friend Gene Fowler, tentatively entitled The Legend of Gene Fowler, The Illegitimate Son of Buffalo Bill.

A coroner's office spokesman said Smith's body was found by a maid at the Clift Hotel.

Smith had been visiting San Francisco for several days and was to be in Los Angeles Tuesday night for a party with members of the International Chili Society, friends said.

Cause of death was not immediately known.

Smith's best-known works were Low Man On A Totem Pole and Life In A Putty-Knife Factory, published in the early 1940s.

Smith, a native of McLeansboro, Ill., began his writing career at 15 as a reporter on the Huntington Ind. Press. His career was cut short when a friend distributed a mildly pornographic story called Stranded on a Davenport.

His academic career also ended with the sofa tale, but Smith was untroubled. He later explained that as a youngster, he had fallen down a well head-first and was discovered two hours later, contentedly eating mud.

Response Tremendous

The Heart Fund campaign in the Capital district has produced $31,140 so far towards a goal of $125,000 for Vancouver Island.

"Canvass returns are just starting to come in and we are excited by the tremendous response we have received," said Marianne Hanson, co-ordinator for the Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Heart Foundation.

SELECTED AS one of only eight out of 200 provisionally chosen from all Canadian cities, to appear in a professional road company production of the musical, A Chorus Line, is Sheila McCarthy, seen here in her role as the Princess in Bastion Children's Theatre production of Byron the Wonderful Bandit. Sheila,a former member of Canada's Feux Follet, is living in Victoria but auditioned in the east. Another of the chosen eight is former Victoria dancer Valerie Smith. Byron, incidentally, will be seen only twice more, this Saturday and March 6 at Open Space, 510 Fort.

Court Co-Ordinator Urged

A court co-ordinator is needed to solve the problems of packed street-level courts, says Scott Marshall, who said Tuesday he had submitted his resignation from the Greater Victoria prosecution office, effective April 30.

Marshall, 28, said he was leaving for personal reasons and not because of the workload of a prosecutor in the main criminal-court section of Victoria provincial court, where he spent much of his time in his year on the job.

He is going into private practice with the firm of William McElmoyle and Rodney Smith, and thus will be appearing in the same court as a defender.

Prosecutors in street-level courts start work daily between 8 and 8:30 a.m. and have little more than an hour to prepare for court opening at 9:30.

They must be ready to handle the often lengthy call list by speaking to bail, helping to set trial dates, giving facts after guilty pleas, discussing sentences and then conducting trials when the list ends. "And there is no overall co-ordination of the courts — the judges, the prosecutors, the sheriff's office and the clerk's office. There is no one person responsible for direction of all the different units," said Marhall.

EMBASSY HOSTAGE TAKER 'TERRIBLY WRONGED MAN'

BEURUT (AP) — A member of the Lebanese parliament says a man who held hostages at the Canadian Embassy in Beirut Monday, is not insane or a criminal, but a "terribly wronged man."

"Mohammed Eddy Haymour has suffered great injustice," said Michel Maalouly, who negotiated the safe release of 23 hostages Haymour held in the embassy at gunpoint.

"Haymour was deported from Canada without his four children and without a penny although he amassed a considerable fortune during his 21 years of work there," Maalouly told the Beirut newspaper Al Bayrak.

"When Haymour and four Lebanese cousins stormed the Canadian Embassy, he meant only to try to recover his financial rights and children. He never intended to kill or hurt anyone."

Haymour is a naturalized Canadian, from Lebanon's western Bekka Valley, which Maalouly represents in parliament.

During the seven-hour embassy siege, Haymour demanded custody of his four children from his estranged Canadian wife, Loreen, and the return of an island he said he bought in Canada.

Maalouly said Haymour told him his wife was a Jewess and had "conspired with a pro-Zionist Canadian judge to declare him insane and have Canadian authorities seize his island, which Haymour planned to turn into a holiday and tourist spot."

Haymour said Zionist organizations in Canada turned aganst him because he called the island the "Island of the Arabs."

Haymour and his four cousins are being held for questioning by Lebanese military authorities.

TOURIST NEWS GLUM

Paul Revere's second coming may herald glum news for Victoria's tourist industry.

Terry Farmer, outgoing president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre, warned industry representatives Tuesday Americans have noticed that food and lodging prices are "much higher" here than in the U.S.

He said this could have a serious effect on the local tourist scene, particularly this summer when U.S. Bicentennial celebrations will prove a strong magnet for Americans to stay within their borders.

"We will have to become a little more efficient" in an effort to keep operating costs as low as possible, Farmer said, and employers will have to obtain the full co-operation of their staffs in order to provide the highest standard of service.

Stressing the importance of the industry to Victoria's economy, he said an estimated $137 million is spent in the city by tourists, and as each dollar is spent at least three times it is "passed down the line."

Of the total, about 28 per cent goes to stores and businesses, 19 per cent to travel, eight per cent to entertainment, 22 per cent to food and beverage establishments, 16 per cent to lodging and five per cent on miscellaneous expenditure.

Elected to two-year terms on the executive of the Visitors Information Centre were: president, Al Frame; vice-president, Ken King; treasurer, Ted Balderson; secretary, Bill Tindall.

Witchdoctor Non-Eligible Expense

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Youth and culture minister Marisho Sarakikya says the government had fired the national soccer association's executive committee for hiring a witch doctor to accompany the national soccer team on out of town trips.

Grounds for the dismissal were "misusing public funds" in hiring the witchdoctor in an effort to improve on Tanzania's soccer record, the announdement said.

He said the witchdoctor traveled with the team to Mozambique, Ethiopoia, Sudan, Malawi and other countries.

Soccer observers said the national team's record in international games showed no obvious improvement.

Stakeout Snares Wrong Youths

A nine-hour stakeout of an apparent cache of stolen goods by Victoria police Sunday did not produce the hoped-for result — arrest of the thief — but gave two teen-aged boys a fright they won't soon forget.

According to a police report disclosed Tuesday, police received a call at about 2:45 p.m. Sunday from a woman who said her son had found four boxes filled with items in a crawlspace under a hall at 1430 Fairfield Place.

Police said the items included 148 eight-track tapes, 86 cassettes, 28 long-play records, three pairs of speakers and an eight-track player. The total value was estimated at $2,300.

Police marked some of the tapes and LPs and then set up watch. At about 5:15 p.m. two teen-aged boys appeared, discovered the cache and began to sift through the recordings.

The staked-out officers approached and stopped them.

The police report said the officers, after questioning, decided the boys were "opportunists" and let them go.

The stakeout continued until 1 a.m. Monday when officers gathered up the goods and returned to the police station.

Stocking Up —Cheaply

EDMONTON (CP) — A man who checked into a West Edmonton Motel apparently thought he had found an inexpensive way to obtain furniture.

The Motel clerk said the man filled out a registration card, putting a car licence number on it. Because he had not arrived in a car, the clerk asked where it was, and the man siad it was being repaired.

Tuesday morning, finding the room chained from the inside, the motel staff gained entry and found the bathroom window was missing and the unit stripped almost bare.

The list of missing articles included a color television set, mirror, lamp table, end table, medicine cabinet, towels and bedding.

Tire tracks were found near the open window and a note was left saying: "Sorry for the trouble, but I'm opening my own hotel and I have to furnish it."

SANCTUARY BID FACES LONG DELAY

A drive by local divers to have the Ogden Point area declared an underwater sanctuary to save marine stocks is doomed to a long delay.

The problem is the federal and provincial governments are waging a legal battle for jurisdiction of the Straits of Georgia and Juan de Fuca.

For two years the Aquarius Diving Club has petitoned both the provincial parks department and the federal fisheries department for help. They claim stocks of octopus, abalone and wolf eels have already been wiped out by spearfishing. Stocks of ling cod have become rare.

A. F. Lill, chief of the Strait of Georgia division in Vancouver, said Tuesday the latest round in the hassle ended in the B.C. Appeal Court Feb. 16, with the provincial government appealing an earlier decision that the federal government controls the waters between Vancouver Island and the Mainland and the island are Washington.

B.C. is claiming the jurisdiction because the waters are "inland seas."

Lill said the battle may not be over even when a verdict is brought

"If B.C. is successful, the federal government might well appeal to another court," he said.

Meanwhile, federal and provincial officials say their hands are tied until the legal fight is settled.

Back in the 16th century, John Bradford, upon seeing prisoners taken to their place of execution, would exclaim: "But for the grace of God, there goes John Bradford." This expression has become universalized, the implication being that under other circumstances, anyone might have fitted into another's place.

If a title were required for today's deal, an apt one would be: "There, but for the grace of God, go I."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Dbl.	4 ♠	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

North's double was of the take-out variety, and East's four-club bid was of a pre-emptive nature, its aim being to make it more difficult for South to enter the bidding. South, however, came in with a four-spade bid.

After capturing the opening lead with his club queen, East studied the dummy. He did not like what he saw, and he came to the conclusion that there seemed to be little hope of defeating South's contract in legitimate fashion. As he viewed the setup, deception seemed to be the defenders' sole hope.

At trick two East led the nine of hearts, right into the jaws of dummy's holding in that suit! Dummy's ten-spot won the trick.

From declarer's point of view, there was no doubt that the nine-spot was a singleton, and that East was making this lead in the hope that West would obtain the lead before East's trumps were picked up. A heart return would then enable East to win a trick by ruffing.

The jack of trumps was led to trick three, West's ace taking the trick. West now returned the eight of hearts. Declarer, absolutely certain that East had no more hearts, confidently finessed the board's queen. To declarer's surprise, East won this trick with the king and led another heart. West made haste to ruff this lead, for the setting trick.

Had East led any suit but hearts at trick two, declarer would have fulfilled his contract with ease, since in this case West would never have gotten around to ruffing a third heart lead.

I'm glad that I wasn't the South Declarer, for if I were, "There but for the grace of God, go I."

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 4456 for the game today. Two 4s, one 5, and one 6. Using all four digits each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no words or summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, also roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, a solution for 63 could be 64—5+4.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 102. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Pot Law Query

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A Superior Court Judge Tuesday declared Connecticut's marijuana-sale law unconstitutional because the law equates the drug with dangerous amphetamines and barbiturates. The law provides penalties of up to seven years in prison and a $1,000 fine for possessing marijuana, barbiturates or amphetamines with intent to sell them.

Uranium Hidden?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal inspection team was in Erwin, Tenn., Tuesday checking reports that employees at a plant may have sidetracked an undetermined amount of bomb-grade uranium.

A spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said the six-member team is expected back in Washington today, but results of the investigation may not be complete for several days.

NRC Commissioner William Anders sent inspectors to the special metals fabrications plant, 100 miles east of Knoxville, last weekend.

The action followed a broadcast report that employees may have retained enough uranium to create an imbalance in the plant's uranium accounting system. National Public Radio reported that the reason "a small number of workers" may have diverted the material was to have a cache available against possible accounting shortfalls.

The NRC sent a team to the plant, owned by Nuclear Fuel Services, a subsidiary of the Getty Oil Co., late last year when the bookkeeping system at the facility indicated a significant quantity of enriched uranium was not properly accounted for.

Rather than showing the uranium missing, the accounting system shows there is more uranium in one area of the plant that records indicate went in there, the NRC says.

The incident "was not serious in terms of missing uranium," the NRC spokesman said, "but very significant in terms of lax procedures that could have led to a serious safeguard breach."

Strict New Nuclear Rules

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Strict rules governming export of nuclear materials have emerged from secret meetings held by seven nations in an effort to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons, it was disclosed Tuesday.

A U.S. state department official told a Senate foreign relations subcommittee that as a result of consultations with other exporters, the United States had decided to abide by "certain minimum principles" in its sale of nuclear equipment abroad.

George Vest, director of the state department's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs, declined to say in public whether other countries also had agreed to abide by the principles.

However, Dr. Fred Ikle, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, clearly indicated there was such agreement when he said yesterday the decision had been taken by the United States "together with other exporters."

Although both men declined to say which countries were involved in the talks, reliable sources said other participants were the Soviet Union, Canada, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan.

The sources said the talks were capped last month by a London meeting at which each participating government notified the others that it had accepted the principles.

Vest said recipients of nuclear materials must apply International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and give assurances they will not use U.S. exports to make nuclear explosives.

They also had to have adequate physical security to prevent theft and sabotage of nuclear material and had to ensure these conditions if they transferred material or equipment to other countries.

Vest said the United States, in addition, intended to exercise restraint in exporting nuclear fuel enrichment, fuel reprocessing and heavy water production equipment.

The United States also would encourage the idea of regional reprocessing and enrichment facilities to deal with fuel from a number of countries.

U.S. TAKEOVER OF MARIANAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has approved legislation to make the Northern Marianas—a group of Pacific islands near Guam—a commonwealth of the United States.

President Ford is expected to sign the bill, which eventually will extend U.S. citizenship to 14,000 residents of the 14 islands. They presently are in a district of the United Nations Pacific trust territory.

The senate voted 66 to 23 Tuesday for the house-approved measure. A plebescite on the Commonwealth covenant was supported by 79 per cent of the voters int he Marianas last year.

Senate proponents of the bill said it was important to reaffirm the United States' strategic position in the Pacific, following its withdrawal from Indochina. Opponents aregued the move splintered the 2,000 islands of Micronesia in violation of the United Nations position on trust territories.

By George, They Cannot Tell a Lie!

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Sotheby Parke Bernet Gallery didn't want to be accused of peddling a fake George Washington memento in the bicentennial year.

Thus, minutes before it was to go on the auction block Tuesday, the prestigious firm withdrew a document billed as the 1775 "working copy" of Washington's commission as commander in chief of the Continental Army.

The reason: A handwriting expert said the scroll was "no damn good."

Sotheby's issued a one-paragraph statement saying it would "institute further definitive research" on the sheepskin document.

"Given the controversy surrounding this piece and the short time prior to the sale, it would be practically impossible to offer it advantageously," Sotheby's said.

Authenticity of the memento was challenged last week by Charles Hamilton, author of four books on antique autographs and owner of the Charles Hamilton Gallery. He called the evidence which Sotheby's presented to certify the document's legitimacy "an adventure in fantasy."

The gallery had hoped to get $60,000 for the scroll, which it called "the most significant Washington relic to come to light in more than 100 years."

Hamiltop said it was worth a few hundred dollars.

The hand-lettered commission copy had been put up for auction by Richard Ahlstrom, treasurer of an Ohio industrial chemicals firm, who said he picked it up for $12.50 at a sale.

Hamilton disputed Ahlstrom's claim that the document was written in 1775 by Charles Thomson, secretary to the Continental Congress.

"I told the man it was no damn good," Hamilton said.

Family Shot, Boy Kills Intruder

BLUE MOUND, Tex. (AP) — The 20-year-old son of a suburban family shot and killed a teen-aged neighbor in the darkened house where the gunman's own father, mother, and two younger brothers had been shot to death, police said Tuesday.

Authorities said Gregg Joplin, returning home Monday night after a visit with an aunt, found his mother's body sprawled on the living room floor. He picked up a .22-calibre rifle from behind a door, heard a noise and fired twice.

Police said Terry Trice, 17, died of a bullet wound in the head. Trice lived nearby in this town of 2,800 near Fort Worth.

No charges were filed against Gregg Joplin, the family's lone survivor.

Commander Named For Space Shuttle

HOUSTON (AP) — Astronaut Fred Haise, of the Apollo 13 moon mission that nearly ended in disaster, will command the first flight test of the space shuttle, America's next generation of space craft.

Officials said Tuesday that Haise, 42, will control the approach and landing test of the shuttle, designed to be the workhorse of the U.S. space program in the 1980s and 1990s.

With him on the flight will be Charles Fullerton, 39, an astronaut who has never flown in space.

A second approach and landing test flight crew was also named Tuesday. The cremen are Joe Engle, 43, the commander, and Richard Truly, 38, the pilot.

The shuttle, a $4.2-billion spacecraft resembling an airplane, is under construction and is to be ready for flight next year. The shuttle's first test flights will be atop a modified Boeing 747 jet transport.

Later, probably in July, 1977, the shuttle will be released at about 25,000 feet.

Pesticide Lawsuits Top $83M

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Lawsuits seeking a combined total of more than $83 million were filed in Richmond, this week in connection with the production of the pesticide ingredient Kepone.

Most of the plaintiffs are close family members of former employees of Life Science Products Co. Inc., of Hopewel, Va.

Life Science produced Kepone at a small plant on a contract basis for Allied Chemical Corp. The firm was closed last summer by state health investigators who discovered high levels of Kepone in the blood of plant workers.

Several employees entered hospital after suffering poisoning symptoms. The symptoms included tremors, memory defects, liver damage and rapid eye movements.

PMs to Meet

LONDON (AP) — Prime Ministers Wilson of Britain and Liam Cosgrave of Ireland will meet in London March 5 to assess next moves in the critical Northern Irish situation, the British government announced Tuesday. Their conference will follow the expected windup of the province's constitutional convention around March 2.

REFUSE SUBPOENA ON CABLES—FORD

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford ordered the U.S. justice department and defence department to refuse compliance with a House of Representatives subcommittee subpoena for records about government interceptions of cables sent to and from U.S. citizens, congressional sources say.

A spokesman for the House government information subcommittee said Tuesday the committee has been told that Ford is prepared to invoke executive privilege to keep the subcommittee from obtaining information on Operation Shamrock, the now-defunct cable-interception program.

Four FBI agents and a National Security Agency employee who were involved in Operation Shamrock were scheduled to testify today before the subcommittee, headed by Representative Bella Abzug (Dem. N.Y.).

The subcommittee said late Tuesday that Ford ordered Attorney-General Edward Levi and the defence department in a memorandum last week to refuse to comply with the subcommittee's subpoenas for all records on the interception of cable traffic.

Turkey Again Close To Bloody Fighting

By ALAN COWELL

ANKARA (Reuter) — Turkey may be heading for a resurgence of the bloody guerrilla fighting that prompted the army to intervene in 1971.

The country's endemic and unabating political violence has claimtd at least 27 lives in three months and there are strong indications that underground extremist groups, smashed after the 1971 coup, are regrouping.

The darkest omen for Turkey's domestic stability came in January when security forces gunned down three alleged members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army-C (TPLA-C), suspected of killing two policemen a few days before.

It was the original TPLA and a handful of other groups that claimed responsibility for the bank robberies, killings and kidnappings that marked the early 1970s.

Leftwing analysts contend that the apparent rebirth of the TPLA may be an elaborate conspiracy by extreme right wingers who want to create a pretext for martial law, facilitating a crackdown on dissent.

But Premier Suleyman Demirel, who returned to power last April after being toppled in 1971, maintains that the guerrillas of the early 1970s, jailed following the coup but released in an amnesty three years later, are again on the warpath.

The TPLA-C bears marked similarities in its amateurish style to its predecessor. Government officials say it is Palestinian-trained and it appears to be in loose alliance with the handful of left-wing activists among Turkey's five-million-strong Kurdish minority.

The most ominous resemblance to pre-coup days, however, is that Demirel seems powerless to stem the bloodletting.

Although security forces are better equipped and trained than five years ago, clashes between left-and right-wingers and between the police and mainly left-wing groups have grown steadily.

The situation, however, is far less tense than at the beginning of the decade. Extremist cells have yet to overcome internal squabbles and gather wide support and the fighting has had no direct impact on the vast majority of Turkey's 40 million people.

The army, still basking in the public acclaim it won for invading Cyprus, is reported to be reluctant to intervene in domestic matters again.

Since the days of Kemal Ataturk, the founder of modern Turkey, the military has played a central political role as the neutral custodian of the founder's secular, progressive ideals.

But this role was tarnished after the 1971 coup as successive military-backed administrations rounded up hundreds of left-wingers amid allegations of torture in military jails.

There has been no firm indication of how far the new underground groups have gone in reorganizing themselves and securing arms supplies.

Were they to become active again, it is by no means certain that Demirel's shaky four-party coalition could curb the activities of extreme right-wing vigilantes.

The unrest has become the No. 1 domestic issue in Turkey's tangled politics, adding to the problems facing the rightleaning government.

Demirel, with an eye to next year's general elections, would probably prefer not to risk unpopularity by declaring martial law.

However, there are elements within the ruling coalition who would regard the iron fist of the military as a welcome reinforcement for their extreme rright-wing youth movements.

These groups view their role as protectors of law and order and have been compared to the Hitler youth.

The left-leaning opposition leader, Bulent Ecevit, is doing his best in public statements to discredit the prime minister by saying his coalition is protecting right-wing ruffians.

Demirel has responded in kind, accusing the opposition leader of being an integral part of anarchy.

Violence reached a peak with the TPLA-C incidents near the town of Malatya in Kurdish-dominated eastern Turkey.

Hundreds of troops, supported by helicopters and secret servicemen from Ankara, took part in the "search and destroy" operation to round up the TPLA-C men and their sympathizers.

Dozens of people were arrested, reflecting Ankara's perennial fear of Kurdish unrest and the government's apparent desire to stop trouble at its inception.

But the operation led to a rash of protests in which one person was killed and there was little optimism here that the fighting would stop, despite government plans to give the police much wider search and arrest powers.

Committee Runs Ontario Family

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A five-member committee running a single household might look like too many cooks to most families, but not to the Orfalds of Belleville.

In this family, the parents and three teen-agers are equally responsible for its smooth functioning.

Social worker Scott Orfald is a department head at Hastings County Family and Children's Service. His wife, Anne, is a psychologist at the Child Development Centre here. Each serves one day out of five as cook and housekeeper at home and their three teen-agers complete the other three days.

What many families consider an unorthodox and probably impossible operating schedule, the Orfalds say was an easy and gradual transition.

"Many people are in a state of upheaval because they're re-examining their roles," said Mrs. Orfald. "It can be a big change.

"But for us it was a gradual thing and it's been very easy."

The reason the family has been sharing household responsibilities was because none of them enjoyed cooking, washing or ironing, Mrs. Orfald said.

Of her three teen-agers, David, 18, Cathy, 17, and Susan, 15, Mrs. Orfald said David was the most innovative and thrifty cook.

"He's the only one who'll use up other peole's leftovers," she said.

But David said his mother was the best cook and "knows how to make the most things."

Mr. and Mrs. Orfald say they're often teased by friends and co-workers about their unusual family structure. Mr. Orfald says male friends might feel threatened by the switch of roles in his household.

"When I told a friend about our system," he said, "he told his wife. Now he has to cook once a week and he doesn't like it."

Cathy says that most of her friends are looking forward to establishing similar partnerships in their futures.

Mr. and Mrs. Orfald attribute their unconventional ideas to the roles played by their own parents in their upbringings. In both cases, fathers took a greater share of household responsibilities than in more traditional families.

Mr. and Mrs. Orfald said the individual freedom given each family member in learning to cope with household problems as they arise will equip their children for the years ahead.

U.S. STILL CHASING FIRST WAR DEBTORS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foreign countries have paid off all but $633 million of their Second World War debts to the United States, accoring to the state department. But they still owe $34.5 billion from the First World War.

Paul. H. Boeker, assistant secretary of state for international finance, testirind that major debtors on Second World War loans include China, which owes $79.5 million; Cuba, $61.6 million; Egypt, $58 million; Pakistan, $35 million, and Iran $35 million.

He told the senate subcommittee on international finance that the United States is trying to collect on the debts. "We pursue any delinquencies vigorously," Boeker said.

Boeker said there is little hope of recovering the First World War debt. Finland is the only European country to discharge its war debt in the United States.

Hydro Hikes Rates 16%

Electricity rates throughout B.C. will jump eight to 16 per cent next month, B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner announced today. Among details of the new rates, which will also affect gas customers and appear on next month's billing:

— about 80 per cent of commercial and small industrial customers will have electricity rates boosted 12 to 16 per cent.

— all classes of customers in Greater Victoria using liquid petroleum gas-air will face a rate increase of 12 per cent, but the island gas system will continue to operate at a loss.

Bonner said Hydro faces an operating deficit of $35 million for the year ending March 31 and the loss would climb to $80 million by next March without the rate increases.

Aim of the new rates is to leave the power authority in a "slightly better than break-even" position by next year so its borrowing power to keep pace with expansion demands is unimparied.

"It is unfortunate that rate increases must be introduced at this time," Bonner said, "but the serious state of Hydro's financial situation offered no alternative.

"It has been a choice of revenue or financial ruin."

Average increase in electricity rates for home owners is 11.9 per cent and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was asked how that relates to federal anti-inflation controls.

He said he has not seen the new rates and doesn't want to comment until he has studied them.

"With respect to prices in general terms," he said, "the control guidelines do not apply if it's a cost pass-through. There's nothing that restricts prices to 10 per cent — it's a question of cost pass-throughs."

Bonner said large industrial customers such as oil refineries, mines and plywood plants, have contracts which require one year's notice of rate increases. They will have electricity rates go up by an average of 10.1 per cent April 1, 1977 followed by a further average increase of 8.1 per cent a year later in 1978.

Bulk customers such as pulp mills and electro-chemical plants require two years notice and will have an average increase of 18.8 per cent effective April 1, 1978.

Rate increases will range from 8 to 12 per cent for almost all natural gas customers in the Lower Mainland served on the standard firm rate. A few very large commercial customers will have rates higher by 12 to 24 per cent.

Bonner said that for more than 85 per cent of Hydro's 750,000 residential electricity customers the average increase will be less than $3 a month. Cost of cooking a Sunday dinner will still be only about 10 cents.

B.C. Hydro's rates will be under annual review and if present inflationary trends continue, annual rate increases in the future can't be avoided, he said.

"In addition to heavy transit losses, Hydro has been faced with substantial increases in the costs of building new projects, the costs of borrowing money and the effect of inflation on all facets of the utility's operations."

He said B.C.'s electricity and gas increases are typical of those being introduced by major utilities across Canada and the U.S. and these forms of power remain among the best energy bargains available.

Ford Edges Ahead

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Ford edged out Ronald Reagan today in New Hampshire's primary, the first test of voter preference leading to next November's United States presidential election, and Jimmy Carter strengthened his claim to favorite status with a comfortable triumph in the crowded Democratic field.

With only a scattering of votes remaining to be counted after a see-saw race, Ford had 53,959 or 51 per cent of the vote to Reagan's 52,652 or 49 per cent.

Former Georgia governor Carter defeated four major candidates on the Democratic ballot.

The New Hampshire primary serves as an early indicator of public opinion in the U.S. presidential sweepstakes. It results are not binding on the state's delegates to party national conventions where presidential condidates are chosen. Some state primaries commit convention delegates to primary winners.

Final returns were slow in coming in, partly because officials in Keene, a Ford stronghold, delayed release of their totals until a more complete picture of the city's voting was in.

A SEAT IN THE SUN — when it finally comes — will be provided at various points along the Government Street semi-mall this summer. City paint shop employee Brian Robinson puts a finishing touch to one of the attractive old-style benches, made in the city's public works yard from a design borrowed from the city of Seattle.

More Snow Thursday

Heavy snow flurries reduced visibility to less than two miles in the Greater Victoria area today and there is more to come Thursday, but the weather office says there is no cause for alarm.

As long as the temperature remains at 3 C (38F) the snow will melt, a spokesman said.

Snow remained for a short while on the Malahat and road conditions were slippery, according to RCMP.

Compared to the mainland Victorians are lucky. As much as six centimeters of snow fell on parts of the lower mainland and Fraser Vallery early today, causing driving problems on higher levels of the north shore of Burrard Inlet.

The reason for the snow flurries is because cold air has moved down to a level of 1,000 feet and this is mixing with moist air from the southwest.

Rinkside Supervisors At City Hockey Games

A brawling hockey game in Saskatoon last week between the Victoria Cougars and the Saskatoon Blades sent several players to hospital, one with a serious eye injury. The wave of criticism touched off by the game may produce a permanent change in rules in the Western Canada Hockey League.

In the controversy following the game, the Blades Booster Club has written to Victoria city council asking support for a move which would see anyone responsible for a similar bread of hockey violence ousted from the game at all levels.

How do Victorians feel about the Saskatoon club's suggestion? Do Cougar boosters feel the violence has gotten out of hand? Let's hear from Times readers. Please send in the coupon below to the Times and give your opinion. No names will be used without first getting permission.

Send to: Opinion, Victoria Times, Editorial Dept., 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria, B.C.

Victoria city council will ensure that there is rinkside "supervision" of hockey games in the Memorial Arena for the remainder of the current season, to deal appropriately with any outbreaks of violence.

And to curb the problem in future it wants safeguards written into its next contract with the Victoria Cougars.

Council approved the measures at its caucus meeting Tuesday, on a recommendation from Mayor Mike Young.

The mayor, who had voiced strong concern following last Friday's rough-house incident at Saskatoon, said such action at the arena was necessary because council had with the capabilities of the League (Western Canada Hockey League) in eliminating violent acts."

Young said arrangements should be made to supervise the remaining games on the Cougars' schedule which runs out March 27, "with a view to prosecution in the event that any violence does take place of a criminal nature."

The person or persons would "observe" the games, and he wasn't sure if police officers would necessarily be involved.

In addition, recreation director Jack Morgan should be instructed to propose appropriate anti-violence provisions to be included in the city's next contract with the club, and that contract would be considered "in the light of ppovisions made by the league to prevent a recurrence and in the light of the conduct of the clubs for the remainder of this season."

Young stressed that council wasn't trying to sit in judgment on what had happened at Saskatoon, but it was taking note of the concern expressed by civic suthorities there.

"We must move strongly and effectively to ensure that it doesn't happen in our bailiwick," he told council, adding that sports clubs have an obligation to the public to ensure public facilities are used in a lawful manner.

"We have to be forewarned and forearmed— and I might add the feeling is widespread."

Law and Order Bill 'Protects Society'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Capital punishment would be abolished in Canada and replaced with longer jail terms for murderers, gun control and tougher bail and parole rules, according to legislation introduced Tuesday by the Trudeau government.

The measures are contained in a two-bill law-and-order package presented by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and Justice Minister Ron Basford.

The two bills form a package of proposed amendments to the Criminal Code. One deals with murder and its penalties, the other provides measures to beef up the protection of society against crimes of violence.

But in Vancouver, a B.C. prison officers' spokesman said the anti-hanging bill is "an absolute farce."

Bob Kerr, president of the Joint Peace Officers Council of B.C. said in an interview that the new security proposals in the criminal law amendment act will result in hostage-taking by prisoners becoming a weekly event.

Kerr, a guard at Chilliwack Forest Camp, also predicted an increase in "accidental" shootings by policemen and a general acceleration in the crime rate.

"The federal cabinet lives in an ivory tower," he said. "They're not walking the streets and they're not in the prisons. And we're losing the battle against crime in both places."

Kerr said his group will fight the government's stand by becoming politically active.

Rod Keary, president of the B.C. Police chiefs association and New Westminster police chief, said the association probably would make its position known after a meeting March 4.

The Allmand bill would create two categories of murder, each punishable by life imprisonment if it is adopted by the Commons.

Persons convicted of first-degree murder would have to serve 25 years in prison before being eligible for parole, compared to the present 15 years.

Those convicted of second degree murder would have to serve a minimum of 10 years but a judge, in individual cases, could boost that up to 25 years after seeking the view of the jury.

First degree murder would include the following:

—planned and deliberate murder including "contract" murder,

—the murder of a police officer or a person working in a prison or penitentiary in the line of duty,

—murder committed in the course of hijacking of aircraft, kidnapping and certain sexual offences including rape and attempted rape.

Second-degree murder would include all other murders, such as murders of passion.

In addition, convicted murderers would not be allowed unescorted temporary absences or day paroles until they had completed all but three years of their mandatory sentences.

Allmand told a news conference there was no "scientific" basis for the 25-year minimum sentence and indicated he was not overly happy with it.

It was, in effect, a trade-off so that the Commons would pass the abolition bill. There will be a free vote on this and it promises to be close.

The government plans to bring the Basford protection bill for second reading in the House next Tuesday and see if through to committee for article-by-article study.

—Measures are proposed to authorize provincial governments to create special commissions of inquiry into organized crime.

—Wiretap laws would be amended to give the police more leeway to use such devices in their fight against organized crime.

The courts will be authorized to allow police wiretaps in relation to all indictable offenses. At present there is a specified list of offenses in the law.

—New provisions would allow the courts to impose an "indeterminate sentence" against "dangerous offenders including sexual offenders."

Bank Revenue Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia announced Tuesday that its balance of revenue increased 125 per cent to $1.2 million for the three months ended Jan. 31, compared with a balance of $532,000 for the same period of 1975.

Quake Toll 22,778

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Guatemala's national emergency committee says at least 22,778 people died in the violent quake that devastated much of Guatemala last Feb. 4.

98% Favor Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Transportation Union has voted 98 per cent in favor of a strike, union spokesman Glen Bowles said Tuesday. After counting the vote, the UTU contacted the British Columbia Railway about resuming negotiations beyond the confines of the Munroe Report, which includes recommendations unnacceptable to the union.

Fourth Frigate

LONDON (UPI) — Britain said today it is sending a fourth frigate, the Andromeda, to disputed fishing waters off Iceland. It said the Andromeda would arrive Friday.

Peron Foes Press

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Isabel Peron's foes in Congress were trying to rally a two-thirds majority today to impeach her or declare her unfit to govern Argentina.

ONE-TON HASH HAUL

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP officers seized an estimated $9 million worth of hashish, one ton of the drug, in a raid carried out Tuesday night in the west part of the city, a police spokesman said.

Insp. Roger Perrier said five men and a woman were arrested on the Trans-Canada expressway, and police believe the suspects were coming from Dorval airport when they were arrested.

Also seized were a 2-engine Cessna aircraft, a one-ton truck and two cars, Insp. Perrier said. The hashish was found in the truck, he said.

EMPLOYERS BACK GUIDELINES

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia employers negotiating with unions are increasingly sticking to the federal income guidelines, William Hamilton, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said Tuesday.

He said the change is taking place on a month-by-month basis and he hopes by June "well see a fairly solid position being taken by management."

Hamilton was commenting on the decision of the Canadian Labor Congress to fight the guideliness at the bargaining table, and on the fact that many employers have joined their unions in efforts to get the anti-inflation board to approve settlements above the guidelines.

The CLC said unions should negotiate for settlements which will be rejected by the anti-inflation board, because when the program ends the full negotiated settlement must be given.

Hamilton said the CLC is "counselling people to break the law and that's a 'no no' in anybody's books.

"The regulations provide that no such residual provision covering future increases may be negotiated and agree to where they evade the impact of the anti-inflation regulations," Hamilton said.

STRICT GUN CURBS PLANNED

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A series of gun control measures, including licencing of people to possess firearms, are contained in Criminal Code amendments introduced in the Commons Tuesday.

Justice Minister Ron Basford said the objective of the measures is to "screen out potential misusers and to restrict the availability of guns."

Every person in possession of any firearms or ammunition, will require a licence.

The licence, valid for five years, will be issued only when the licencing officer is satisfied that the applicant has nothing in his background that would render him unfit to possess a licence.

Applicants for licences will also be required to submit the statements of two guarantors, from a selected list as in the case of passports, who have known him for more than two years.

Persons under 18 who wish to use firearms will require special permits.

All firearms and ammunition dealers, both wholesale and retail, importers and manufacturers must have permits.

They must also keep records of every transaction involving firearms or ammunition.

There will also be efforts to collect unused firearms. Many of the 10 million long guns in Canada are held by Canadians who no longer have any use for them.

Persons using offensive weapons while committing an indictable offence, will be liable to a mandatory minimum sentence of at least one year and up to a maximum of 14 years, to run concurrently with any other sentence imposed.

In Vancouver today, Vic Wall, director of the B.C. Federation of Shooting Sports, said that the legislation is aimed at the wrong group of people.

"We feel the aim of the government is to disarm the law-abiding Canadian citizen instead of concentrating on the criminals as they should be."

"Many people have quite expensive collections of firearms which are being used in a law-abiding manner, and I don't think for a moment the average sportsman will simply come out and turn them in without any compensation or anything," he added.

Sydney Police Back

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Police in this steel-making city of 33,000 returned to their jobs early today after a meeting of city and union officials convened by attorney-general Leonard Pace. The policemen went back to work after suspensions of the 63-man force were lifted.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years. He's a wonderful husband and devoted father to our two children, ages 12 and 14, but he's terribly stubborn about one thing — and that is my problem:

Three months ago he was laid off from his job (machinist at an aircraft plant), so he took a job at a local department store as a salesman. His take-home pay is about one-fourth of what it was previously.

When I suggested that I also get a job to help make ends meet, he became furious. "No wife of mine is going to work," he screamed.

Abby, I know he means well, but every time I try to discuss it with him, he becomes upset. Please help.

GLENDA IN GLENDALE.

DEAR GLENDA: If I can help by saying that it's no reflection on a man's masculinity if his wife works — I've helped.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been sexually active for a number of years with quite a few partners.

Now that she is in her middle 20s she is marrying one of those partners who probably knows about the rest.

We are happy for her and approve of the marriage, but she wants a white gown and veil!

We are shocked at her dishonesty and bad taste. So many of our friends and relatives are aware of her lifestyle.

We are not trying to punish her by refusing to go along with her wishes, but we're reluctant to make a mockery of what a white wedding stands for.

There must be other parents with this problem and other young people in this situation. Will you and your readers help?

DISTRESSED PARENT.

DEAR PARENT: In planning a wedding, the wishes of the bride and groom should take priority. The bride who wears a white gown and veil is not necessarily declaring herself to be a virgin.

There is some one who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long
since you went,

There is some one who thinks
of you always,
And tries to be brave
and content.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,
Silent the voice we loved
to hear;

'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,
The best are always
the first to die.
